The administration of a police organization is a task in directing the daily activities of many men. Keeping each of these men keyed up to his best is a problem in the management of human beings, whose work in turn consists in regulating human relations, thus promoting safety and good order in the community.

To achieve these ends a large organization with imposing equipment and record systems must often be provided. It must be noted, however, that the ultimate end of any structure of organization is to be found in the acts of the individual officer, operating for the most part alone and initially unaided. Efficient police work in its final analysis is dependent upon a well trained, spirited personnel.

It can, therefore, be said that the heart of police administration is the training, stimulating, and directing of men in the exercise of good judgment and initiative while on post or assignment. Such intangible and modifiable factors as good judgment, sympathy, patience, courage, and intelligence must be an inherent part of the individual law enforcement officer.

In order to adequately meet the crime problems which arise, in order to maintain the highest standards in police work, it is necessary that the highest practical qualifications for law enforcement officers be established and that those who are selected for such work be properly trained.

The training of carefully selected personnel has been proven to be an economical practice and it is encouraging to note the many law enforcement agencies providing training facilities for their personnel. There has come a realization that the maintenance of high professional standards in law enforcement work is assurance of a progressive program in meeting crime problems.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

INAUGURATION OF NATIONAL STOLEN PROPERTY FILE

The Federal Bureau of Investigation at this time is pleased to announce the inauguration of a National Stolen Property file for the purpose of recording information, descriptive data, and facts surrounding the theft of stolen property. It is the hope of the Federal Bureau of Investigation ultimately to so expand this file which is now being inaugurated upon a rather selective basis to enable it to become truly national in character and to afford to all law enforcement agencies a complete reservoir of information as to stolen property comparable to the information as to criminal histories now maintained in the Bureau's Identification Division.

At present the Bureau is prepared to receive and to record in its files for the information of any law enforcement agency any stolen property (1) which may be described by name, model, and serial number, such as watches, firearms, bonds, typewriters, or similar office equipment; and (2) all stolen property involved in thefts amounting to an aggregate value of $5,000 or more, such stolen property, of course, being described in detailed nomenclature as to individual items involved.

In order to properly record the data submitted it will be necessary that the contributing law enforcement agency advise the Bureau in its communication at the time of reporting the stolen property the name of the victim, the type of crime in which the property was taken, and the names of any suspects known to the investigating officials in connection with the crime.

It is hoped after a careful study has been accorded to this project in its initial stages to devise a more standard descriptive method to conform to a uniform nomenclature to be utilized in designating all stolen property, particularly that of a miscellaneous character which does not bear serial numbers. At present the reports as to property stolen may be submitted in the manner usually employed by the reporting agency.

An invitation is hereby extended to all agencies to offer any suggestions which they feel merit consideration in the development of this project.

COOPERATION BETWEEN RAILROAD POLICE AND OTHER LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES
EFFECTING THE APPREHENSION OF
LLOYD DALE--MURDERER

It is agreed that cooperation among all law enforcement agencies is the basis for an effective combating of crime. That this is realized, is well illustrated by the successful prosecutions now resulting from united effort of local, state, and federal law enforcement officers.

Also contributing to the maintenance of law and order are the police organizations of privately owned business enterprises; their cooperation is likewise essential. Perhaps the most outstanding in this group of agencies are the police organizations of the railroads throughout the country. Exemplifying the effectiveness of combined effort of law enforcement agencies and the railroad police is an interesting case recently brought to the attention of the Bureau.

On September 8, 1935, R. D. Gordon, Special Officer of the Western Pacific Railroad Company, was brutally murdered in the Western Pacific Yards at Stockton, California. Gordon was cut and stabbed twenty nine times, death resulting from a severed jugular vein. Investigation conducted by the Sheriff and Western Pacific Railroad Special Agents at Stockton, California, disclosed that Gordon had probably been murdered by two negroes, Lloyd Dale alias "West Coast," "Whiskers;" and George Gautchaux alias "Back Door," "Curly."

Their connection with the crime was established through the recovery of two bundles left at the scene of the crime. One of the bundles was identified by several jungle habitues as the property of a jungle habitant known as "West Coast," subsequently determined to be subject Lloyd Dale alias "Whiskers." Further investigation among various jungle habitants later resulted in a definite ascertainment that "West Coast" was the owner of that bundle. The other bundle, a blue denim bag, of the civilian corps size and type, was found at the scene of the crime and was definitely identified as the property of Gautchaux. At Tracy, California, it was learned that Dale had been seen by a bootblack the day following the commission of the murder; at this time he had no bundle and had blood stains on his trousers and on his shoes. This bootblack, making inquiry of Dale concerning the blood stains, was told that they were a result of Dale's having killed a few chickens. From jungle habitants at Stockton, it was also developed that Dale had boasted the fact that he had toured practically all the jungles in the United States, and that he was familiar with practically each and every railroad water tank in the United States.

The Sheriff's Office at Stockton, California, issued a circular No. 830 dated October 2, 1935, carrying a photograph of the bundle found at the scene of the crime, reciting the facts of the case and giving the description of "West Coast" and one "Chief," an Indian or Mexican, who it was believed may have been a witness to the crime. On November 12, 1935 suspect Gautchaux was apprehended by the San Jose Police Department in the jungles located in the proximity of San Jose, California. Upon his apprehension, he denied any knowledge as to the murder of the Railroad Special Agent, but admitted that he had seen "West Coast" on September 7, 1935. However, he denied being in Stockton, California, on the night of the crime. Gautchaux admitted that the bundle found at the scene of the crime belonged to "West Coast," and stated that "West Coast" also had a knife. On November 12, 1935, a wanted notice, advising that Dale was wanted in this case was placed in the Identification Division of the Bureau, and a notice likewise published in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin for January, 1936.

Circular No. 830 was superseded by circular No. 831 on November 16, 1935, carrying in addition to the facts of the case, the photograph and fingerprints of subject Dale alias "West Coast," "Whiskers." These new circulars were sent to law enforcement agencies and railroad police throughout the country, upon receipt of which a check was begun in all jungles. The Bureau also began an investigation in cooperation with the local officers, jurisdiction being passed on the fact that it was apparent that Dale had fled from the state of California to avoid prosecution for murder.

It was ascertained from a confidential informant that Dale knew that he was being sought by the authorities, and had made the statement that he would never be taken alive, and further that he had even threatened to kill the negro witness, George Gautchaux. Information was also developed to the effect that Dale was keeping out of the jungle camp environment and had shaved off his whiskers in an effort to make it more difficult to recognize him. About December 4, 1935, information was received which indicated that his home was in Cleveland, Ohio, and that he had stated that he might go there to spend the holidays. This information was forwarded by the Special Agents of the Western Pacific Railroad Company to the Superintendent of Police of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in Chicago, who in turn through his men enlisted the aid of the police of Cleveland, Ohio, requesting that they contact all law enforcement agencies, in an effort to apprehend Dale should he return to the vicinity of Cleveland, Ohio.

On December 28, 1935, a negro, Everett Bestor, who answered the description of Dale was arrested at Alliance, Ohio. He was released, however, when it was determined that he was not Dale, through a comparison of fingerprints. There was a striking resemblance in the appearance of the photographs of Dale and Bestor.

On the morning of January 5, 1936, at 10:30 a.m., a Pennsylvania Railroad Special Agent patrolling the Railroad Yard at Niles, Ohio, observed a negro wearing a heavy beard, Vandyke style, loafing along the Pennsylvania tracks. Observing the negro's actions and his features, he partly identified him as being "West Coast" alias "Whiskers" wanted by the Stockton, California, police authorities, in connection with the murder of the Special Agent of the Western Pacific Railroad Company. Not being positive of his identification, he shadowed the negro for about an hour as he walked about the back streets of Niles, Ohio, and when he finally drifted to the passenger station, he positively identified him and placed him under arrest for trespassing.

The negro, upon being questioned by the Railroad Special Agent, gave his name as John J. Smith, age about 30 years. He could not say where or when he was born, and claimed to have no legal place of residence but admitted that he had travelled from coast to coast riding freight trains for the past five years, making his home in jungles along railroad tracks. He claimed to have arrived at Niles, Ohio, via a Pennsylvania Railway freight train the night before, from some point west, the name of which he did not know. Smith declined to divulge much information regarding his whereabouts during the preceding five or six months other than that he had worked for a merchant transport ship line out of San Francisco, California, but he would not say how long ago that had been.

The negro was lodged in the city jail at Niles, Ohio, overnight, and before being locked up was thoroughly searched for a knife or gun. The only things found on his person were tobacco, cigarettes, and papers, and several safety razor blades, yet the following morning when taken out for a hearing, it was observed that he had shaven off his beard and was wearing a small "Charlie Chaplin" moustache, and had trimmed his side burns to a point below the lobes of his ears. When asked how he had shaved himself, he stated that the officers who had searched him the day before had overlooked a safety razor blade in one of his pockets, and that he had shaved himself with that. It was evident that he had shaved to avoid identification, and it was the opinion of the officials that the razor blade was concealed in the lining of his coat or in his shoes. He was taken before the municipal court at Niles, Ohio, where he entered a plea to trespassing and train riding, and in default of payment of the fine was committed to the county jail at Warren, Ohio, where he was again interrogated by the Railroad Special Agent.

Upon comparing his fingerprints, features and scars with those set out on circular No. 831 issued by the Sheriff at Stockton, California, he was positively identified as being one and the same person shown on the circular as "Whiskers," "Coast to Coast." The subject had a blotch scar on the left forearm, and his right upper eye tooth was crowned; there was also a three-quarter inch scar, which does not show on the circular, but the subject claimed that it had been incurred about two months prior from a bad scratch received while riding a refrigerator car.

At the City Police Department, he was photographed and fingerprinted. It was a difficult matter to obtain perfect impressions of his prints, due to the fact that he had to be watched very carefully, as he ruined two sets of prints in the taking by side twisting his finger on the print, or dragging it across the print. This was apparently being done to prevent a good imprint being taken. Another outstanding feature was that it was impossible to obtain perfect impressions due to the fact that the fingers, down to the first joint, had been burned with what appeared to be a hot iron. However, after taking several impressions they were classified, and their classification was identical with those of Dale as appeared on the wanted circular. Going further to effect the identification, the fingerprint of the little finger on the left hand was enlarged and nineteen points of characteristics were developed as identical. Having made certain of Smith's real identity, and in order to detain him until extradition to California could be effected, an affidavit was filed against the defendant designating him as a fugitive from justice.

When officers arrived from California, Smith was further interrogated and admitted that his correct name was Lloyd A. Dale, also known as "Coast to Coast," "Whiskers," "West Coast," and upon being shown the circular which carried a photograph of the knapsack or roll found at the scene of crime, he openly admitted that this knapsack or roll had been his until someone had stolen it on the date of the murder. He also admitted that on the same day that his roll or knapsack had been stolen that he had left Stockton, California, on the first freight out of there, going north to Washington, then to Portland, Oregon, where he was arrested along with some other negroes and fingerprinted, later when released he had come East.

After Lloyd's removal to Stockton, California, he admitted the murder of R. D. Gordon on September 8, 1935, and, making a full confession, admitted that he alone was involved in the commission of the crime. He expressed his intentions of pleading guilty to a charge of murder, thus bringing to a close an investigation in which all types of law enforcement agencies, throughout the United States participated to the common goal of apprehending a wanted criminal.

REMOVAL OF WANTED NOTICE

In the November, 1935, issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin on pages 26 and 27, information was set out concerning Robert Lee Cohen, a missing boy. All law enforcement agencies were requested to conduct any investigation possible looking toward the location of Cohen, and to post missing person notices in their respective files.

To assist in a possible identification of the missing boy, latent fingerprints of Cohen were reproduced on page 22 of the December, 1935, issue of the Bulletin.

Law enforcement agencies are now advised that Robert Lee Cohen was located at a transient camp near Rochford, South Dakota, on February 15, 1936, and any wanted notices placed concerning him may now be withdrawn.

INK DEVELOPING LATENT FINGERPRINTS

It may be interesting to note that liquid developers are sometimes useable for the development of latent fingerprints, especially on paper. One of the best, and at the same time the most universal is ink, either full strength, or diluted one-half with water.

A QUESTIONABLE PATTERN

As an aid in establishing a more uniform interpretation of questionable patterns among the identification officers all over the country, there will be published from time to time in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin an enlarged photograph of a fingerprint pattern concerning the classification of which there might be some dispute. Together with this questionable pattern will be published a brief explanation of the manner in which this pattern would be interpreted in the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Identification officers are urged to forward to the FBI from time to time photographic reproductions of questionable patterns which may have come to their attention. A prompt answer will be forwarded on all such patterns received indicating the manner in which that pattern would be interpreted in the Identification Division of this Bureau.

The accompanying photograph illustrates a pattern type that causes considerable difficulty among the fingerprint experts in determining the exact classification which should be applied. This is a transitional type pattern, lying between the loop and the central pocket loop. In considering the possibility of the classification of this particular impression as a central pocket loop, your attention is directed first, to what Sir E. R. Henry says concerning this pattern type: "Such impressions may, therefore, be said to possess features which require their being defined as loops in respect to the majority of their ridges and whorls in respect of the appearance of the few ridges which occupy a space immediately about the centre, a delta more or less faintly defined having in consequence made its appearance. Upon the analogy of a nomenclature adopted in mining, the space so occupied by ridges whose course deviates from the course of the ridges surrounding them is described as a 'pocket' and the impression as a central pocket loop."

There is obviously, in this pattern the majority of the ridges taking the form of a simple loop and the chief problem therefore, is to determine whether or not at the points marked A, B, C, and D there are ridges which make a complete circuit to form the pocket of which Sir E. R. Henry speaks.

With regard to points A and B, the presence of a sharp point on the bottom of these ridges leads to the conclusion that instead of having here a recurving ridge, there is, instead, a convergence of the two ridges. Now the problem is to determine whether either of ridges C or D recurve far enough to form the pocket which is mentioned above. At this point reference is made to page 25 of the pamphlet entitled "The Classification of Fingerprints", which is published by the FBI and made available to all law enforcement officials. The following test is suggested there that will apply in this instance: "A test to be applied to distinguish loops from central pockets is to point an imaginary arrow toward the core of the pattern (in a whorl the brow of the innermost recurve) and if this arrow strikes an obstruction squarely, a central pocket exists." A like test is suggested by Sir E. R. Henry in his book. In the particular pattern which is now being considered if such an arrow were pointed toward the core of the pattern it would strike ridge D at right angles. This is sufficient, therefore, to classify this print as a central pocket loop.

The second or inner delta is to be found at point E where a bifurcation appears. Often in transitional patterns of this type the inner delta is difficult to locate. In such cases the "arrow" test mentioned above can be effectively applied. Here the ridge ending at point D clearly recurves past the delta and the minimum requirements of the whorl are satisfied.

Therefore, in the files of the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation this particular fingerprint pattern is classified as a central pocket loop. However, it should be noted that in all instances concerning transitional patterns, such as this, the impression is searched not only in the preferential classification, but also in the classification represented by the particular type of pattern which it approximates. In other words, this pattern would be searched both as a central pocket loop and as a plain loop.

RETAINING ORIGINAL NOTES

The law enforcement officer conducting any type of investigation very often finds it necessary to take notes. These notes will be concerned with observations made at the time of the investigation, notations of important identifying data as serial numbers on guns or automobiles, such items as dates, names and addresses, descriptions, comments made by individuals interviewed or any other particulars which require accurate recording for later use in preparing reports or conducting investigations and which might easily escape the memory before occasion arises to testify concerning them.

These original notes should always be retained, either by the investigating officer or in the case file, properly identified, until prosecutive action has been completed. Too often they are misplaced or even destroyed, resulting in unsuccessful prosecutions when cases go to trial many months after the investigation has been completed. The investigating officer cannot hope to remember serial numbers or identifying data of detailed nature in a particular case and for that reason properly takes notes. However, unless he retains the original notes, in many instances he may as well have neglected that portion of his investigation covered by the notes, from an evidential value standpoint in a court proceeding.

It is a well settled and undisputed principle of the law of evidence, that a witness, within certain legal restrictions, may refer to written or printed memoranda, documents, papers, notes, for the purpose of refreshing, assisting and stimulating his recollection and memory with regard to the facts about which he is testifying.

Human memory is such that very few persons are able to testify relative to dates, numbers, quantities, after the lapse of a few years, unless they are permitted to refer to notes which they knew to be correct at the time that they were made. It can be generally said that the notes to be used in refreshing the witness' memory should be made at or about the time to which they relate. This rule of law, which allows the witness to refresh his memory by notes, is founded on the reason that law presupposes that the notes, used for the purpose, were reduced to writing so shortly after the occurrence, when the facts were fresh in the mind of the witness, that he can with safety be allowed to refer to them in order to remove any weakening of memory on his part which may have resulted through lapse of time.

Due to the fact that improper uses may be made of notes, counsel has been given the right to inspect these notes as a safeguard against abuses of their use. This safeguard has been found necessary by the courts since a witness may sometimes, for the purpose of adding weight to his testimony with the jury, produce a memorandum claimed to have been made by him at the time of an investigation, when an inspection of the paper will show it to have been of more recent origin, or from the handwriting or other circumstances to have been prepared with a view to affecting the testimony.

The memorandum must be the act of the witness and contemporaneous with the event noted, otherwise it cannot necessarily be associated with the state of mind that existed when the impression on the memory was made. If the witness swears that he made the entry or memorandum in accordance with the truth of the investigation as he knew it to exist at the time of the occurrence, of which he is at the time of the trial still convinced, he may use his notes or memorandum to refresh his recollection.

The time when the memorandum was made is of vital importance when notes are to be used to refresh the memory. It is strongly advocated that the officer's original notes be retained and used by him rather than reproductions from his original notes which, when properly introduced, may be used to refresh his memory, in some jurisdictions.

It is perfectly proper for the officer to consult his notes to refresh his memory. As a matter of fact, his testimony is actually strengthened if it appears that, at the very time of the investigation, he ascertained certain facts and immediately made detailed records. In some jurisdictions the courts have actually held that the notebook itself, properly identified, might be introduced into evidence. However, it should be remembered that where notes are allowed to refresh the memory of the witness the cross examiner has the privilege of seeing the memorandum or notes made by the witness and may cross examine him as to the authenticity of those notes as mentioned heretofore.

The need for precaution in retaining original notes can possibly be best illustrated by those cases in which law enforcement officers check motor and serial numbers of automobiles upon the recovery of those cars or the apprehension of criminals in them. When an officer arrests an individual in the possession of a stolen automobile he should at once write down, in his own handwriting, the motor number, serial number, the license number, make of the automobile, or other pertinent data, retaining the notes until after prosecuting action has been completed. If these notes are destroyed before the trial, the officer may be placed in an embarrassing position if questioned by an alert defense attorney, as it should be borne in mind that the officer must not only show that a certain automobile was stolen but further, that the car recovered by him was identical with the car stolen.

The matter of taking notes by law enforcement officers should not be confined to the cases involving automobiles as set out above, but it is suggested that the investigating officer write down an accurate description of any property recovered together with the date and place recovered. Notes taken of the description of the scene of a crime with accurate measurements taken thereon will prove invaluable in the solution of a case and later testifying concerning the details of the case.

It is believed that attention to the retention of original notes will do much toward aiding and increasing the successful prosecution of criminals since unsuccessful prosecutions, in many cases, can be traced to lost and destroyed original notes or an unsuccessful effort to refresh the memory from typed investigative reports wherein are included pertinent data, but which were not originally prepared by the investigating officer, and their use, therefore, subject to objection by defending counsel.

THE INFLUENCE OF CRIME ON THE AMERICAN HOME

Due to the number of requests received for copies of the address delivered by Director J. Edgar Hoover, before the Round Table Forum, under the auspices of the New York Herald Tribune, at New York City on March 11, 1936, that address is being reproduced herein for interested law enforcement officials.

"It is a distinct privilege to address the members of this Forum. In so doing I feel that your interest in this subject may bring about effective action against what constitutes the most dangerous menace to the happiness and the welfare of the American people since our civilization began. Crime has reached a pinnacle of appalling heights. It lives next door to us. It rubs elbows with us. Its blood-caked hands touch ours. A lackadaisical attitude now has resulted in a crisis.

"No American home is free of this shadow. Aggravated robbery, theft, arson, rape, felonious assault or murder annually is visited upon one of every 16 homes in America. Last year in this supposedly enlightened advanced civilized country there was a minimum of 12,000 murders and an estimated total of 1,445,581 major crimes. Thus, one of every 84 persons in the United States was subjected to injury or death through the workings of this tremendous crime aggregate.

"Beyond this, there is a constant toll of the rackets; here no home is exempt. The criminal toll is taken upon food and services, and actual physical violence includes the loss of life itself. The American home and every person in it is today in a state of siege.

"I hope you will receive these facts not as those of an alarmist but as the view of a conservative person reporting conservatively upon a most astounding set of terrifying conditions. The crime problem in America is something which should take precedence before any other subject other than that of livelihood itself. Even then it becomes a correlated subject because it is costing each American citizen a minimum of $120 a year. This is the per capita tax which must be assessed to pay our annual crime bill, estimated to be more than fifteen billions of dollars. If the entire cost of crime could be eliminated for two years, that saving would pay off our entire national debt. Freedom for three years would pay the entire cost of America's share in the World War, plus an enormous bonus. We have lived for years in apathy; crime in its present proportions cannot exist without apathy and we are paying a total bill of billions for a national lack of vigilance. The result is a direct blow at the safety of the American home.

"I hope this Forum will realize that it has a distinct and solemn duty. No battle was ever won without leadership. Today, there is indeed a crying need for that leadership in the mobilization of every possible defensive and offensive weapon of public opinion, public vigilance, public courage and public willingness to carry on relentlessly and without surcease a battle to the death against the multifold minions of crime. Just so long as there is no highly active opposition to crime in a community, just so long will that community be crime-ridden. I need only to point to the dozens of law-enforcement scandals which exist in our American cities today to bring forcibly before you the fact that in spite of all the lip service which is going on about this menace, little indeed is being done to actively eradicate it. Newspaper after newspaper comes forth with the details of grand jury investigations, vice crusades, police inquiries, scandals in prisons -- and there to all intents and purposes the matter ends. Should a typhoid epidemic descend upon a city, shadowing it with the danger of illness, we would find thousands of volunteers ready and willing to risk their lives in an effort to protect their loved ones against the ravages of this foe. Yet, the insidiousness of crime is such that even though a greater danger exists we find that the average citizen reads his newspaper, sees the black headlines screaming the details of conditions which are as symptomatic in their way as the ravages of the most deadly disease that ever has swept this country. Practically nothing is done about it. So I am telling you now that conditions have reached a place where you can take your choice! You can rise up and fight. You can use some of the fortitude which is supposed to have been granted the American people through the courage which made this country the greatest independent nation of the world. You can gird yourself for a long and difficult fight upon armed forces of crime which number more than three million active participants and by so doing you can set yourselves free from the dominance of this underworld army. If you do not care to do this, then you can make up your mind to submit to what really amounts to an actual armed invasion of America.

"Again, I must insist that I am speaking conservatively. I have said that crime begins at home and that we are doing nothing - comparatively nothing - to protect that home. My proof comes in the fact that 20% of our crime is committed by persons not yet old enough to vote, by those not even out of their "teens", by those who often are not even past high school age and who should still be under the active management and responsibility of the home. Yet, we of law-enforcement, find these children stealing automobiles, we find them committing almost a thousand murders every year; we find that there are tens of thousands of burglaries and larcenies perpetrated by boys and girls who, in any other generation, would have been under the discipline of vigilant parents. This is an undeniable indictment of the American parent of today. In case after case where the youth of America becomes a felon before he is able to become a voter, the story is the same monotonous repetitious collection of facts. There has been a lack of discipline; of watchfulness. I find indulgence in apathy, misbehaviors leading to more serious infractions of home rule and in turn leading to petty and then vicious and deadly infractions of the law. We cannot wholly blame these youths for the crimes they commit. We must go behind these crimes and blame the true perpetrators - the fathers and mothers - who so failed in their duty, who were so prone to the amusements of the moment, who, through mental laziness, allowed discipline to relax and their children to go into the world and reap the harvest which they, the parents, really sowed.

"Flooding to me every day in the disillusioning business of watching the criminal flood stream by, I see the reports of local officer after local officer; I hear the stories of probation supervisors, of persons engaged in the thankless job of trying to reconstruct the wreckage of American youth. I find courts jammed with youthful defendants and equally crowded with parents and friends of those parents, determined only upon one course—that of getting their boy or girl, as they call it, 'out of trouble.' I find that they go to any length of political pressure, monetary pressure, business pressure, the pressure of friendship, to restore that boy or girl to the place where he or she really gained the criminal instincts, which was in the indulgence of the home. And it becomes a sad task to oil the machinery of apprehension and detection, thus bringing closer the menace of reformatories and prisons for these children of crime who were brought to the portals of dishonor through the negligence of older persons who should have led them into upright paths.

"Until the criminally-minded person, the extraordinarily selfish person, the highly egotistical person, the ultra-greedy person who wants what he wants and cares not how he gets it can be taught the inexorable lesson that he cannot get away with violating the laws of society without adequate punishment - until that day arrives, just so long will you have a constant menace of serious crime. Crime begins in America today in the cradle and the greatest influence toward eradicating that sad condition is the hand which rocks the cradle.

"I have said before that upon this Forum rests a heavy obligation; first of a reconstruction of American viewpoint toward better parental discipline and a greater sense of law abidance beginning in the home. However, that is only the beginning of the problem which lies before you.

"It may be of interest to know that only about one out of four of our criminals is arrested for his misdeeds. It may be of even greater interest to know that when a man commits a crime and starts upon his escape, the easiest avenue toward freedom is after he has been apprehended by a law-enforcement agency. Far too many persons escape the clutches of punishment in the courts and after conviction and, continuing this thought, you should remember that many of the men and women who are today in our penitentiaries are not even given an adequate punishment for the crimes they committed. The greatest mantle of safety in the criminal world is known as 'copping a plea.' The criminal realizes that he may commit twenty crimes and pay only for one; further, that he, through shrewd attorneys, through the bribing or frightening of witnesses, through the delays of law, through countless statutes which exist for his protection, may be placed in a haggling position with a prosecuting attorney, with the result that he bargains for his punishment. It is a sad commentary upon our civilization that in the majority of our criminal trials, the old definition of justice has been utterly and absolutely lost. I say this because in many of the cases, there has been a process which I can liken only to the pushing and jostling of an auction sale, in which the matter of punishment takes a position of a commodity to be traded for and argued over, until at last the man who is guilty of murder comes into court and pleads guilty to assault. I submit that no criminal ever existed who would deliberately walk into court and plead guilty if he were not guilty. It is an absolute certainty that this man would not plead guilty to the full extent of his crime if through any possible means he might receive a lesser punishment. Therefore, we have the amazing picture of a group of men aggregating thousands upon thousands a year who, through their very pleas of guilty, make our criminal jurisprudence a matter of disgrace in that they are allowed to confess a lesser crime than that of which they are really guilty. As long as this exists, just so long will the criminal world figure its profits as a businessman would figure the prices received for his merchandise, and just so long will the underworld count upon inadequate punishment as one of the aids in getting away with murder. Speaking of murder, may I place the thought before you that the average time served by prisoners in America for the commission of our most heinous crime, that of taking human life, is less than four years behind the walls of prison, a part of which time frequently is served in the position of trusty.

"We are supposed to be one nation, one people - then why, I ask you, is the penalty for murder in one state merely that of life imprisonment, which in an aggregate of cases is followed either by parole or pardon within a few years, while in another state, the penalty for the same crime is death? Why should the robbery of a store in one state bring about a sentence of 5 years, while in another a man is supposed to serve 20? Why should the holdup of a bank in one community merit a prison term of from one year to life, with parole or some form of clemency usually extended after the first year, while in the neighboring commonwealth, a man may serve away the best years of his life in atonement? Why should there be no uniform laws governing these matters? Why should it be possible for a criminal to break the law and, by merely stepping across a state line, be free from pursuing officers who are hedged about by extradition technicalities when they seek to bring him back for his crime? Why should it be a state offense to sell various forms of narcotics in one part of the United States, and no state offense whatever in another portion? Why should criminal jurisprudence be governed by one set of procedure here and another set in a different locality?

"These matters are all local ones, and in the local community little attention is paid to them because they are not viewed from a national angle. However, while the citizen may look upon his crime only locally, the criminal views it from the standpoint of the entire United States. He knows where he can rob a bank and pay the slightest penalty. He knows where he can commit a murder and be eligible for clemency within a comparatively few years. He knows where courts are lax. He knows where prisons have, as criminals call it, 'low walls that are easy to climb over.' He knows where local legislators, seemingly intent upon the protection of the innocent, have written technicality after technicality into the state statutes, until it is almost impossible to convict an enemy of society. He knows where there are 'fixers' who will guarantee freedom for the payment of a certain amount of money. He knows where there are politicians so eager for a criminal vote that they will gladly trade the safety of their community for it. He realizes all these highly important conditions because he is in the business of crime, and the only thing which can put him out of that business is for the American people to make it their business to combat crime and all of the filthy, stultifying influences which foster crime. Of those stultifying influences, may I say with utmost emphasis that the most important of all is rotten politics.

"Time after time I have talked to honest chiefs of police about matters which are closest to them - the safety and the welfare of their cities. Time after time, these men have told me that they are powerless to move against certain protected elements of lawlessness. They have their choice of remaining in office and striving honestly to do their duty to the utmost against such odds, or of resigning their job and leaving it to be filled by a purely politically-minded appointee of criminally dominated influences. It is to their credit and to the credit of the men who serve under them that the average police officer in this country tries to do his honest duty. To that end, he often faces the danger of politically protected bullets, knowing that when he attempts to arrest some fiendish law breaker, it is within the realm of possibility that this criminal may shoot him down and be spirited to safety by the political influences which he has paid in one way or another for his protection. The policeman's life indeed today is not a happy one, and the greatest service that can be done by the American citizen is to take the shackles off the policeman and put them where they belong -- on the wrists of the crooks.

"Here, today, I ask you again, as molders of public opinion, as persons of influence in your community, to dedicate yourselves to a never-ending campaign toward the divorcement of politics and law-enforcement. There is no sane reason why a warden of a prison, a district attorney, a judge, a sheriff, a constable, a policeman or any other man who chases criminals should live in danger of the bull whip of political retaliation. Yet, throughout the length and breadth of America, we find that the ward heeler, the district leader, often the gangster himself is practically immune from arrest or at least, conviction. Inevitably, the concealed but powerful politicians rise in his defense, to set him free, sneering at the men who strove to place him behind bars.

"As long as immunity from punishment exists in this country, then just that long will you continue to pay your individual crime bill of $120 a year. In these times when there is so much talk of taxes, why, I ask you, do you sit supine, why do you remain resistless against this draining force, which not only takes your money away from you, but endangers your happiness, your homes, and your lives?

"For the first time in history, there is procedure against the forces which operate behind the guns of crime. Not until the Federal Bureau of Investigation began its campaign in such cases as those of the Urschel kidnaping, the kidnaping of Edward Bremer of St. Paul, and of others, which came about coincidentally with the passage of laws which gave this Bureau the right to proceed in such cases, has there been a united effort to punish the sustaining forces of criminality. In the kidnaping of Mr. Urschel, the active number of abductors was 3 men. However, in solving that crime, we found that behind the scenes there existed more than a score of assistants, money changers, hideout keepers, messengers, contact men, lawyers, aides and camp followers of various kinds. The Bureau of Investigation not only sent the three main participants to prison for life, but brought about the conviction of a score of members of this gang who made it possible for the kidnaping to take place. A like record was made in the Dillinger case where 7 men who tried to kill our agents met with death, and where a total of 26 followers, gun molls, hideout owners, and others, were sentenced to prison. In the Bremer case and others, the same procedure was followed and this was possible because the Federal Bureau of Investigation was entirely free from politics and was backed by laws with teeth in them. Free from the stultifying influences of politics, these men have pointed a way. They have shown what can be done when a body of men of fine character, properly trained in scientific investigation, backed by the proper laws and given proper equipment are allowed to proceed upon a determined course for the welfare of this country. To that end, I point proudly to the record of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which shows that 94 out of every 100 persons whom it takes into the courtroom for trial find that there is only one exit, and that is one which leads to prison. May I add that for every dollar expended in making the Federal law a respected and feared thing, our Bureau has been able to return to the American taxpayer eight dollars in savings and recoveries.

"At this time, I wish to express my gratitude to the fine and loyal law-enforcement officers of America who have given us their cooperation in Federal cases, and again it might be wise to ask in your home town why local officers can work so well when they are protected by the proximity of Federal officers and why so many strange influences seem to hamper their steps when the case is purely a local one. Do not construe this as a criticism upon your officers. They would be most happy to have this mystery solved and these strange forces lifted from them -- forces, I might add, which are like the old man of the sea, riding their shoulders, weighing them down, slowing their steps when they begin the pursuit of protected racketeering and protected crime. Crime in the aggregate cannot exist without either malfeasance or nonfeasance in office. The fault is not that of the man on the job, but the fault of the man who owns that job, the man who can appoint a person to fill that job, and likewise take the job away from him.

"I spoke a moment ago about the cooperation of the officer. How about the cooperation of the citizen? Where is it? How often do cases fail because there is no cooperation whatever on the part of the person who should give the greatest of all cooperation, the person who looks to the law-enforcement officer for the protection of his home and his happiness? What do we find in the trial of an average case? First of all, there is the man who doesn't want to go on the jury, a man who regards his business as of greater importance than that of protecting his home. Secondly, we find that there may be a dozen witnesses for the defendant, against one witness for the state. Some citizens are apathetic. More are frankly afraid. Cowards, to put it bluntly. Others can be reached through friendship or political domination to an extent where they actually will go on the witness stand and perjure themselves for the freedom of a man they know to be guilty. All this time they too are paying the per capita tax bill of $120 a year for crime. Is this not an utterly amazing situation? And is it not your duty to campaign relentlessly for better conditions in our juries, for more courage on the part of our citizens in testifying in criminal cases, and for greater insistence that the laws of our country are not only made more uniform, but are made laws for the protection of America instead of laws for the protection of the criminals?

"A visit to almost any state capital will find some lawyer legislator spouting mawkish sentimentalities about the protection of the innocent. The percentage of innocent men who are sent to prison is so negligible as to be almost non-existent. The thought is a cloak used by shyster lawyers in a concerted effort to defeat justice. If any innocent man is convicted in America, there are thousands of guilty ones who get away. The blame rests at the door of a well named group of men - the lawyers-criminal. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has dedicated itself to sending such legal lawbreakers to prison, and has been successful in a number of outstanding cases, only to find that often in the community where these vultures existed, they were looked upon by the citizens as extremely shrewd and clever men. I submit that there is nothing clever in crime. I submit that it is sordid and that there is something sordid in the mind of the person who can find anything to emulate, or anything to applaud, in the vulture-like activities of such individuals.

"The home, the church, and the school must be united upon a common purpose. We cannot correct existing conditions by apathy, by indifference, by supine submission to the dominance of criminally blood-stained influences. We cannot eradicate the outrages of arson, robbery and murder by a gasp of astonishment when we read the headlines. There is only one way to fight, and that is to get out on the battle line and do something. We must insist upon law-enforcement agencies which are unshackled, which can arrest a criminal and make that arrest stick, which are composed of men properly trained for the jobs they occupy. It is one thing to put a uniform on a brawny body, and it is another thing to give authority to a properly trained brain. The time has definitely come when law-enforcement, in all its branches, must be built into a career. The time also has arrived when to select the right person for the right job, a sum of money commensurate with the brains needed shall be paid for that job. Astonishment over the fact that some thousand dollar a year jailer has taken a bribe to allow a super-criminal to escape should be changed to greater astonishment that a civilized nation should be trusting jobholders who can be paid only a thousand dollars a year for the task of keeping our 'mad dogs' in check. This, in a greater or lesser degree, is applicable to every position and item of law-enforcement.

"Now, I come to the most important matter in our tangle of criminality - that of sentimentalism and clemency. You who sit on the sidelines often applaud when some hardened criminal, perhaps up for his fourth or fifth conviction, is severely lectured in court and given, we'll say, a fifteen-year sentence. You sit back, secure in your ignorance, believing that you will be safe for fifteen years from this menace to society. That sentence has been a legal falsehood! Through the utterly amazing workings of our convict-loving parole lawyers, it is possible for that man to return to his life of crime in as short a time as twelve months! There have been actual cases where local judges have made political capital of the fact that they were sentencing men to long terms in prison, when, in truth, agreements had been made with defense attorneys whereby the sentencing jurist would sign a parole petition after a servitude of only one or two years. I state this so that you may make it your business to learn just what happens to the criminals who go through the courts in your communities, and ascertain for yourselves how much time they actually serve.

"I hasten to add, however, that I am an active advocate of the principle of parole. I said the principle, not the present practices which exist in the administration of parole in many of our states. Certainly, every possible endeavor should be made to rehabilitate the person who has offended for the first time against our laws. Crime cannot be cured by inhumanity. A casual of crime cannot be remolded into a worthy member of society by a punishment which leaves him embittered. The first offender should be charged as a first offender, with a commensurate sentence with commensurate treatment, and commensurate efforts to restore him to the place he lost in society. But who is the first offender? It happens that in the perplexity of our laws, in the mass of technical barricades thrown up by lawyer legislators, either directly concerned with the defense of criminals, or associated through friendship or otherwise with those who make their living by defense of criminals, it is almost an impossibility to define the first offender from the old and hardened one. In some states, it is possible for a felon to be listed as a first offender after a criminal history which shows him to have been a repeated inmate of correctional schools and reformatories and after having been repeatedly sentenced to jail and even to city prisons, industrial reformatories, and other institutions of this type. He may have started as a youth by committing a serious crime, which, because he was a youth, became a matter of record only as juvenile delinquency. He may have robbed and stolen for years, and through the technicalities of law, have been saved from penitentiary punishment. He may have committed a score of offenses against our laws, followed by a score of appearances in court. Yet, under our statutes, that man must be looked upon in the same light as the desperate, otherwise law-abiding citizen, who, faced by hunger, steals for the first time in his life.

"As for the rotten practice of the fine theory of parole, I have said before, and I say again, that it is a national disgrace. Hardened criminals are being turned forth in many of our states under a multiplicity of laws which is utterly astounding. There are states which employ not more than one man to watch after and supposedly oversee the activity of thousands of roving criminals, many of whom have obtained their freedom through political affiliations. There are other states where prisoners merely report by letter. Do you suppose they confess every infraction they have committed? If you ever have seen a merchant who advertised that he sold inferior goods; that he cheated his customers; that he was dishonest in his trade practices, then I will grant that somewhere there is a criminal who willingly wrote to a parole board that he was again engaging in thievery, burglary, and murder.

"Until recently, the matter of parole has been the domain of the sentimentalist and the sob sister. It is easy to weep over the fact that a man has been placed behind bars. It is easy, indeed, to shed a tear when one thinks of the fact that he is separated from his freedom and from those he loves. It is not so easy to remember the mangled, shapeless, horribly sprawled form of a murder victim upon the floor, beaten to death by the muscular hands of this very same criminal. Why do not the sob sister and the sentimentalist give some attention to the victims of crime instead of to the perpetrators of crime? Until this attitude is changed, America remains in grave danger.

"At the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, there exists a single fingerprint section devoted to the 12,610 men and women who are viewed by our Bureau as the most dangerous and deadly of the army of over three million persons whose fingerprint records are on file. These are the kidnapers, who steal from the American home that which is loved best. These are the bank robbers who, with machine guns and super-automatic pistols, descend upon the depositories of this nation's funds. These are the cowardly individuals who, firing from ambush, send dum-dum bullets into the backs of our law-enforcement officers. These are the gangsters who, operating under the protection of filthy vote-buyers, shoot down our citizens and loot our homes. Here are enough dangerous men and women to almost form a complete army division upon a field of battle. To move against them, Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation must be equipped with automatic shotguns, rifles and pistols, machine guns, armored cars, tear gas and steel breastplates.

"I hope I have painted a sufficiently ghastly picture of this super-army of criminality. I hope you will remember every word of it and that you will not forget the most important fact of all - the records show that 3,576 members of this desperate criminal group have at some time felt the angelic mercy of parole or probation or pardon or some other form of sob sister clemency. Not only has the mantle of sentimentality or worse descended once but in some cases many times. Often these dangerous criminals have been arrested for new crimes before law-enforcement officials have been informed that prison gates had been thrown open from a previous sentence which they were supposed to be serving. That, in a nutshell, is the story of a national disgrace which has been brought about by this country's debauchery of sentimentalism and clemency. I sincerely hope you will not and cannot forget it."

APPLICANT FINGERPRINTS

In accordance with suggestions received from numerous law enforcement officials the fingerprints of applicants when received in the Identification Division of the Bureau will be searched through and retained in the criminal files unless a specific request is made that the fingerprints be returned to the contributing agency. Under this procedure if the applicant is subsequently arrested, the law enforcement agency contributing the fingerprints of the applicant will be notified of the arrest.

The Bureau also prefers that the fingerprints of applicants be recorded on the regular criminal fingerprint cards with a notation inserted in the charge column that the individual is an applicant.

CITIES WITH MORE THAN 100,000 INHABITANTS, 1934

THE SHADED BARS REPRESENT CITIES HAVING TWO POLICE EMPLOYEES PER 1,000 INHABITANTS, AND THE SOLID BARS REPRESENT CITIES HAVING ONLY ONE POLICE EMPLOYEE PER 1,000 INHABITANTS. THE NUMBER OF OFFENSES PER UNIT OF POPULATION IS INDICATED BY THE LENGTH OF THE BARS AND BY THE FIGURE ENCLOSED WITHIN EACH BAR. IN ALL CASES, THE MORE ADEQUATELY POLICED CITIES REPORT THE SMALLER NUMBER OF CRIMES.

RELATION BETWEEN AVERAGE CRIME RATES AND AVERAGE NUMBER OF POLICE EM

A compilation prepared by the Federal Bureau of Investigation based on data received for 1934 from the police departments of 92 cities, each with more than 100,000 inhabitants, discloses that cities having the larger number of police employees in comparison with the population area policed generally have the lower crime rates.

The number of police employees per 1,000 inhabitants for the cities represented varies from 3.3 to 0.7. It was found that 24 cities having an average of 2.4 police employees per 1,000 inhabitants had 4 murders reported during 1934 for each 100,000 inhabitants, whereas 24 cities having an average of only one police employee per 1,000 inhabitants had more than 10 murders reported for each 100,000 inhabitants. In addition, those cities having an average of 2.4 police employees per 1,000 inhabitants had 46 robberies and 318 offenses of burglary reported for each 100,000 inhabitants as compared with 105 robberies and 558 burglaries reported by cities with an average of only one police employee per 1,000 inhabitants. In general, the following tabulation discloses a similar trend for other types of offenses:

Group	Average number of police employees per 1,000 inhabitants	Average number of offenses per 100,000 inhabitants
		Murder, nonnegligent manslaughter	Robbery	Aggravated assault	Burglary breaking or entering	Larceny-theft Over $50	Larceny-theft Under $50	Auto theft
I.....	2.4	4.0	46.4	37.6	318.2	89.6	553.4	310.2
II.....	1.7	9.1	92.1	82.5	451.5	91.3	661.5	331.7
III....	1.3	10.2	96.6	46.9	480.5	113.4	844.3	404.1
IV.....	1.0	10.6	105.7	83.9	557.9	103.9	1076.6	381.8
III-IV.	1.1	10.4	101.2	65.8	520.0	109.0	957.6	392.7

All cities represented in the above tabulations have populations in excess of 100,000. The arrangement into groups was based on the number of police employees per 1,000 inhabitants (descending order).

- Group I consists of 24 cities.
- Group II consists of 21 cities.
- Group III consists of 23 cities.
- Group IV consists of 24 cities.

The number of cities varies slightly among the groups, because it was believed desirable that departments having identical police personnel figures be allocated to the same group.

The data for groups I-II and groups III-IV are shown in the chart on the preceding page.

BLOOD TESTS FOR ALCOHOL DETERMINATION

The following article deals with the "Estimation of Alcohol in Blood and Urine" as developed by Southgate. This article is published through the courtesy of the authors of the publication entitled "Recent Advances in Forensic Medicine" by Sydney Smith and John Glaister and published by J. & A. Churchill, Limited, of London, England and the P. Blakiston's Son & Company, Inc. of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Southgate developed a micro method for the estimation of alcohol in blood and urine which is a modification of an apparatus designed by Cannon & Sulzer. It is the opinion of many technicians that the alcohol present in the body is uniformly distributed and its estimation may serve as an index of the total amount present. It has further been shown that the amount of alcohol in the urine is approximately equal to that present in the blood.

As in previous instances the specimen is heated to the boiling point of alcohol or slightly higher and the evolved vapors absorbed in an acid potassium bichromate solution. Two pieces of apparatus are illustrated and the operations of the same are self explanatory.

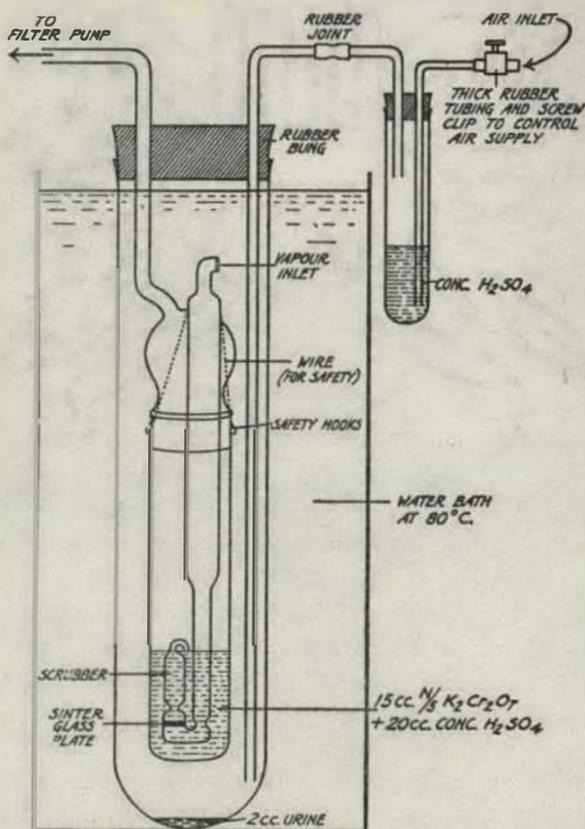

FIG. 65.—Diagram indicating chief features of Southgate's modification of Cannon and Sulzers' apparatus.

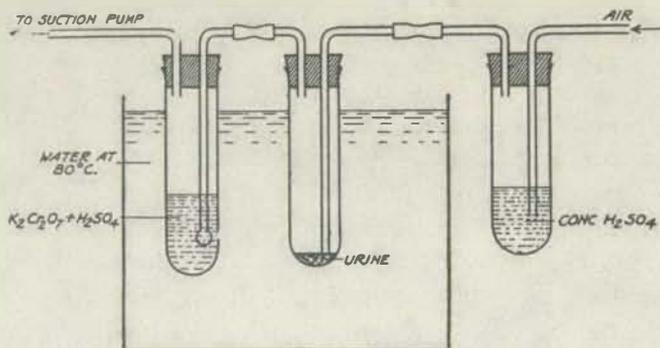

FIG. 66.—A simplified apparatus for the estimation of alcohol.

The former is somewhat more elaborate and the absorption necessarily more complete but quite accurate results may be procured when employing the simplified piece of apparatus.

"Excess of the bichromate mixture is present during the reaction, and the amount of the excess is estimated by allowing it to oxidise hydriodic acid (potassium iodide) to iodine and titrating the liberated iodine with sodium thiosulphate. Decinormal solutions are used throughout, except in the case of potassium iodide, which is .4N. The apparatus is shown in Figure 65. Two c.c. of blood or urine are measured into the wide outer tube, and in the inner tube are placed 10 c.c. of N/10 potassium bichromate (4.903 gm. per litre) and an equal volume of pure concentrated sulphuric acid. The apparatus is connected as in the diagram and, with the air current started, is immersed in a beaker of water maintained at about 80° C. The alcohol volatilises, and is carried through the oxidising mixture, where, the current being broken up into fine bubbles by the Jena sinter-glass sprinkler, it is completely absorbed and oxidised. The current of air is continued for about an hour, or until the urine has been completely evaporated. The bichromate mixture is then quantitatively transferred to a large (1 litre) conical flask or beaker, in which process copious washings can be used, since the total volume must ultimately be made up to 400 or 500 c.c. After addition of 5 c.c. of .4N potassium iodide (51.2 gm. per litre) which must itself contain no free iodine, and a few drops of a 1 per cent. starch solution, the mixture is titrated with N/10 sodium thiosulphate (24.82 gm. of $\text{Na}_2\text{S}_2\text{O}_3 \cdot 5\text{H}_2\text{O}$ per litre) until the deep blue colour just disappears and is replaced by the pale green of chromium sulphate. Sodium thiosulphate solution does not keep well, and should be frequently restandardised against N/10 iodine (12.69 gm. per litre, dissolved in about 40 c.c. of 50 per cent. potassium iodide and diluted to 1,000 c.c. with distilled water).

"Then if x c.c. are used in the titration ($10 - x$) cc. of bichromate were used by the alcohol, and, from the equation, each cubic centimetre of decinormal bichromatic solution is equivalent to 1.15 milligrammes of alcohol. Since 2 c.c. of blood or urine were used the alcohol concentration is given in milligrammes per 100 c.c. by the formula: $57.5 X (10 - x)$.

"The apparatus described by Southgate is very convenient, but somewhat costly, and it may be useful to note that it can be replaced by the simpler form shown in Figure 66. It is useful to retain the Jena glass sprinkler, which ensures the proper distribution of the air current, but even this can be dispensed with and substituted by a glass bulb pierced with a number of small holes. In this case, however, the current of air should be slower than with the original apparatus, and the time allowed for alcohol absorption should be correspondingly lengthened.

"Cwing to the apparent presence of reducing substances in rubber, all stoppers and rubber tubing used in the apparatus should be thoroughly boiled before being used for the first time, and the apparatus should be tested by blank determinations.

"One of the authors has used this method for the estimation of alcohol in the expired air, a procedure which has been advocated, though without much justification, as an aid in the diagnosis of drunkenness. In this estimation the subject breathes through the mixture of bichromate and sulphuric acid, and the air then passes through a meter which records its volume. Five litres is a suitable quantity to take. The remainder of the analysis--the titration of the excess bichromate--is carried out exactly as for urine. The method is also applicable to tissues, or stomach contents, of which 2 gm. should be washed into the outer tube with 1 or 2 c.c. of water, and treated as is urine.

"It must be taken into account that the basic reaction of the analysis is not specific for alcohol, and that bichromate is an oxidising agent of very general applicability. Hence, what is really estimated is volatile reducing substances, under which heading are included acetone and, to a slight extent, lactic acid. Acetone, according to Southgate, does not interfere much, and certainly the author has never found a normal urine which appeared to contain more than traces of alcohol--amounts within the small experimental error. With blood and tissues, however, there appears to be present even normally some substance which reduces the bichromate, and this may cause the results of the analysis to be too high."

The Bureau in publishing these articles makes no recommendations or comments upon the article as published. The sole purpose is to acquaint the law enforcement official with the several techniques employed in order that he may select a method best adapted to his particular laboratory.

VICTIMS IN TRAIN WRECK AT VINCENNES,
INDIANA, IDENTIFIED BY FINGERPRINTS

A Baltimore and Ohio freight train was wrecked near Vincennes, Indiana, on February 26, 1936. Several men who were riding the train were killed as a result of the wreck. The local Police Department obtained fingerprints of the deceased men as a preliminary step in establishing their identities. The fingerprint classification of each was telegraphically communicated to the Bureau. A search of the files disclosed a tentative identification of one of the four deceased individuals as Norman Adolph Koranda, who had been arrested by the Police Department at Dodge City, Kansas, on February 18, 1936, on a charge of investigation, just a week prior to the train wreck. The fingerprint card submitted by the Dodge City, Kansas, Police Department set forth the name and address of Koranda's mother, which information was immediately furnished to the Vincennes, Indiana, Police Department. Incidentally, this was the only arrest record appearing in the files of the Bureau pertaining to Koranda.

The tentative identification of Koranda was later confirmed when his fingerprints were received together with the fingerprints of the three other individuals. The fingerprints of Edward Smith, deceased, and one William Baker, deceased, were searched through the files of the Identification Division without effecting an identification. The fingerprints of the fourth dead man, whose name was unknown to the authorities at Vincennes, Indiana, were searched through the files and found to be identical with the fingerprints of one Russell Anderson, who had been arrested by the Police Department at Fort Worth, Texas, on October 4, 1935, on a charge of investigation, and on December 18, 1935, was again arrested under the name of Russell Anderson by the Sheriff's Office at McAlester, Oklahoma, also on a charge of investigation. On each occasion he indicated his residence as Birmingham, Alabama, which information was immediately communicated to the Chief of Police at Vincennes, Indiana, on February 29, 1936.

FRANK DAVIS

UNKNOWN DEAD MAN IDENTIFIED BY FINGERPRINTS

The fingerprints of an unknown dead man, believed to be G. M. Corey, who had died on February 6, 1936, at Moroni, Utah, were forwarded to the Bureau by the State Bureau of Criminal Identification, Salt Lake City, Utah, in order to definitely establish the identity of the deceased person and, possibly, locate relatives to be notified of his death.

The fingerprints were searched through the files of the Identification Division of the Bureau and found to be identical with the fingerprints of one Frank Davis, who, during his criminal career, had been received at the State Prison, Deer Lodge, Montana, under the name of Michael J. Corey on May 18, 1933, to serve a sentence of two years for the crime of maliciously injuring and destroying real and personal property not his own, which property was in excess of $50.00. Davis had also been received at the same institution under the name of Frank Courtney on January 22, 1916, to serve a sentence of from 20 to 26 months for the crime of burglary. Another fingerprint card reflected his incarceration in the State Penitentiary, Bismarck, North Dakota, where he was received on February 17, 1921, to serve a sentence of from 1 to 5 years for the crime of burglary - third degree, from which institution he was paroled during October, 1921. As M. J. Allenby he was arrested by the Police Department at Aberdeen, South Dakota, on December 22, 1926, on a charge of investigation and was released to the Sheriff's Office at Brookings, South Dakota, on a charge of petty larceny. He was last arrested prior to his death as Michael James Carney by the Police Department at Ontario, Oregon, on October 9, 1935, on charges of larceny and investigation.

Immediately upon effecting an identification of the fingerprints of the deceased person with fingerprints contained in the files of the Bureau a telegram was sent to the State Bureau of Criminal Identification at Salt Lake City, Utah, advising of the identity of the unknown dead man and furnishing such information as would be helpful in the tracing of relatives to be notified.
