Spielman, by a Federal Grand Jury at Elkins, West Virginia, on June 20, 1928, for conspiracy to violate the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act, it being alleged, as Overt Act No. 15, that on or about the twelfth day of December 1927 they transported a Ford Coupe automobile, stolen at Frederick, Maryland, to Martinsburg, West Virginia. On November 20, 1928, the Federal Grand Jury at Elkins, West Virginia, returned an indictment in forty-seven counts, charging Harry I. C. J. Wilson, Chief of Police. John Edgar Hoover, Director Vederal Bureau of Investigation R. S. Bepariment of Instice Washington, D. C.

The Federal Eureau of Investigation has issued publications from time to time endeavoring to acquaint law enforcement officials and agencies with the work and functions of the FBI. By this means we have hoped to bring to peace officers, information that will tend to thoroughly acquaint them with the types of service available, and for the further purpose of encouraging a wider use of the facilities of the Bureau.

I can think of no more effective means of acquainting law enforcement officers with the facilities to aid them, maintained by the FBI, than a visit to its headquarters in Washington, D. C. Here one is afforded the opportunity of seeing in operation the Identification Division wherein fingerprints, making up the world's largest criminal fingerprint collection, are filed as they are received from over 9,000 agencies throughout the United States and foreign countries. The collection of single fingerprint records of known or suspected kidnapers, extortionists, racketeers, gangsters and bank robbers is impressive of the fact that this file may be utilized to great advantage, and I further believe that the rapid strides in the development of scientific methods in crime detection are most clearly emphasized by seeing specially trained scientists actually at work in a crime laboratory that has unequaled facilities for giving assistance to law enforcement agencies.

I, therefore, want to take this opportunity to extend a very cordial invitation to every law enforcement official who finds it possible to visit Washington, to call at the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States Department of Justice Building, where it will afford us much pleasure to have one see the various activities of the FBI.

METHOD OF ARRANGING ENTRIES IN FUGITIVE BULLETIN.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation at this time desires to invite all law enforcement agencies receiving this bulletin to submit their views as to whether they prefer that the individual entries in the bulletins be arranged according to names or according to fingerprint classification sequence. This invitation is extended because of certain suggestions received from various agencies from time to time. The Bureau hopes that all officials receiving this bulletin will submit their views concerning this matter. Since the bulletin is in the nature of a cooperative venture, the Bureau would not desire to make a change of this character without consulting the officers who are interested in the bulletin's contents.

SUGGESTION FOR OFFICIALS TRANSMITTING WANTED CIRCULARS TO CANADA.

The attention of the law enforcement agencies in the United States which transmit wanted circulars to Canadian officials is invited to the following information desired by the said officials in connection with the steps they may initiate to apprehend fugitives:

It is considered to be important that information as to the fugitive status of any person which may be circularized in Canada contain full particulars such as the fact that a warrant has been issued, the charge, whether the fugitive is in custody and, if so, where held, whether the offense is covered by extradition treaty with Canada, a guarantee of expenses if the accused is located and arrested in Canada and any further information which might be pertinent to the subject under consideration.

The Canadian officials have indicated that in many instances the information furnished on wanted circulars forwarded to Canada by peace officers in the United States is too meager to warrant the initiation of action throughout the whole of Canada.

The suggestion has been made by the Director of the Criminal Investigation Branch of the Eoyal Canadian Mounted Police, at Ottawa, that possibly information as to the fugitive status of persons believed to be in Canada and who are wanted in the United States may be routed through the Federal Bureau of Investigation. While the Bureau would be very glad to transmit such information to the officials at Ottawa, it is appreciated that in some cases wanted circulars are dispatched to Canadian authorities in accordance with the usual police practice where no definite leads are available as to the exact whereabouts or location of the fugitive. In such instances it is suggested that the specified and essential information desired by the Canadian officials be incorporated in the wanted notices.

UNLAWFUL FLIGHT ACT

The Attorney General of the United States, the Honorable Homer S. Cummings, in a message to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-third Congress, Second Session, stated: "One of the most difficult problems which local law enforcement agencies have to deal with today is the ease with which criminals are able to flee from the State to avoid prosecution, and witnesses leave the State to avoid giving testimony in criminal proceedings."

As a result of the efforts of the Attorney General of the United States, the following Statute, making it unlawful for any person to flee from one State to another for the purpose of avoiding prosecution or the giving of testimony in certain cases, was approved by the President on May 18, 1934:

> "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be unlawful for any person to move or travel in interstate or foreign commerce from any State. Territory, or possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia, with intent either (1) to avoid prosecution for murder, kidnaping, burglary, robbery, mayhem, rape, assault with a dangerous weapon, or extortion accompanied by threats of violence, or attempt to commit any of the foregoing, under the laws of the place from which he flees, or (2) to avoid giving testimony in any criminal proceedings in such place in which the commission of a felony is charged. Any person who violates the provision of this Act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not longer than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Violations of this Act may be prosecuted only in the Federal judicial district in which the original crime was alleged to have been committed."

The Attorney General, in continuing his comments on this Bill, stated: "Although drastic in nature, it is my opinion ultimately some relief must be provided for those who suffer from offenses committed by criminals who flee from the scene of crime beyond the jurisdiction of the State wherein the crime is committed and eventually escape punishment entirely."

It will be noted that the purpose of this Act is to afford an opportunity for the apprehension of the roving class of criminals who are responsible for so many of the crimes of violence in our country. It is not the design of this Act to usurp the function of State extradition or to return a fugitive, by means of Federal removal proceedings, for State prosecution. The Act itself provides a penalty. However, the Act does extend Federal criminal jurisdiction in a marked degree, and by this extension enables the Federal Bureau of Investigation, United States Department of Justice, to conduct investigations for the purpose of locating and apprehending those persons who have violated the terms of this Statute.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation at this time desires to bring to the attention of all local and State law enforcement officials and agencies the jurisdiction which this Bureau now possesses under this Act.

It will be noted that in addition to providing a penalty for those persons who are accused of committing one of the crimes enumerated in the Act and who flee from the State in which the crime is alleged to have been committed for the purpose of avoiding prosecution, the Act also makes it a Federal offense for a witness in any criminal proceedings in which the commission of a felony is charged to flee from that place for the purpose of avoiding the giving of testimony. The fact that a witness who flees is now guilty of a Federal offense should compel his attendance at the criminal proceedings which he endeavored to avoid, if the fact that the witness may be guilty of a violation of the laws of the United States is made known to him.

As an aid to local law enforcement officers, this Statute should prove of an inestimable value, both from the standpoint of having witnesses available and from the standpoint of insuring that accused persons are not escaping punishment entirely by fleeing from the jurisdiction of a State.

It will be noted that to constitute a violation of this Act, it is only necessary that the person be charged with committing one of the crimes enumerated in the Act, and that with intent to avoid prosecution for such a crime, the person move in interstate or foreign commerce, or that a person who is a witness in the criminal proceedings in which a felony is charged has moved in interstate or foreign commerce with intent to avoid the giving of testimony.

In order that the Federal Bureau of Investigation may more effectively cooperate with and be of assistance to all local and State law enforcement officials, it is desired to bring to the attention of these officers the fact that any violation of this Act which comes to their attention should be reported to the nearest office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the addresses of which appear on the back cover of this bulletin.

The policy of this Bureau is to undertake no active investigation for the purpose of locating a person who is alleged to have violated the terms of this Statute, unless a State process has been issued either charging the fugitive with having committed one of the enumerated offenses or showing that the fleeing person is a witness in a case in which a felony is charged.

INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE OF FINGERPRINTS

One of the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation which has attracted widespread interest and contributed materially to the cause of more effective law enforcement throughout the world is its regular exchange of fingerprints with the identification bureaus of foreign countries.

This project was instituted in March of 1932. Since that time the superintendents of identification bureaus in Accra (Gold Coast Colony), Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Barbados, Belgium, Bermuda, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Danzig, Denmark, Dutch East Indies, Egypt, England, Estonia, Federated Malay States, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Haiti, Holland, Hungary, India, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Latvia, Lithuania, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Nyasaland, Palestine, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Fretoria, Republic of Panama, Roumania, Scotland, Sierra Leone (Africa), Southern Rhodesia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay, and Yugoslavia, as well as the superintendents of identification bureaus of all the territories and possessions of the United States, such as Hawaii, Canal Zone, Alaska, Philippine Islands, Puerto Rico, and Virgin Islands have participated in this activity. A11 law enforcement agencies throughout the United States and Canada have been invited to indicate to the Bureau the cases wherein they desire that the foreign exchange be arranged and to furnish duplicate copies of prints to be relayed to the foreign countries. Further, the bureaus outside the continental United States have been offered the facilities of the Bureau's fingerprint files to elicit criminal records on Americans operating illegally in distant parts of the world. The numerous fingerprints which are being exchanged are an indication of the enthusiastic support which has been accorded this project. For example, during the fiscal year 1935. 2,017 fingerprints were forwarded to foreign bureaus, and approximately 7.18% were identified, while 16.849 fingerprints were received from foreign agencies and identifications were effected in 12.8% of these cases.

Generally speaking, the methods of criminal identification employed in the United States are similar to those utilized by law enforcement agencies in foreign countries. Comments relative to some of the foreign bureaus follow:

In France, the Service de l'Identite Judiciaire, which is maintained in Paris, acts as a central clearing house of information pertaining to criminals for France and its colonial possessions. The entire police organization of France cooperates with this bureau, forwarding the fingerprint records of all persons arrested. The records numbered 1,681, 784 on December 31, 1933.

Fingerprints and photography form the basis of criminal identification in the British Empire and its various units in the British Isles, Canada, Africa and Australasia maintain independent bureaus of identification which cooperate with the New Scotland Yard bureau in London. These bureaus employ the Henry system, with certain modifications and extensions, to classify their fingerprint records. The New Scotland Yard files contained 541,773 fingerprint records on December 31, 1934.

Since the Conference of the German States in 1912, anthropometry has been discontinued as a method of criminal identification in Germany and fingerprint identification has assumed a position of foremost importance with photography playing an important but subordinate part. The laws of Germany do not provide for a national bureau of identification but in practice, the headquarters of police at Berlin acts as a national bureau and furnishes information concerning professional offenders. There were 611,412 prints in its files on January 1, 1935. A combination of the Galton and Henry fingerprint classification systems predominates throughout the country.

Italy utilizes all the known methods of criminal identification, excepting anthropometry, and maintains a national bureau of criminal identification in Rome, which on December 31, 1934, numbered 412,317 prints in its files. All police departments are compelled by statute to submit to the national bureau the fingerprints and record of each subject. The system of fingerprint classification employed throughout Italy is known as the "Gasti" system, which derives its name from the Professor who devised and perfected it.

The Canadian bureau at Ottawa on May 9, 1934, numbered 344,000 sets of fingerprints in its files. The Canadian officials have cooperat 1 fully with the Federal Bureau of Investigation for years.

The extensive bureau maintained at Vienna under the jurisdiction of the Federal Police, which has collected records of criminals of various nationalities for some time past, numbered 631,595 prints on January 1, 1935.

In 1926, the police officials of Finland organized the Central Bureau of Criminal Identification, located at Helsinki. On December 31, 1934, 78,873 fingerprint cards were in the files, a modified form of the Henry system being utilized.

Fingerprints, photography and anthropometry are used for identification purposes in Norway. A national bureau is maintained at Oslo in which there were contained 52,992 fingerprint records on January 1, 1935.

The fingerprints of all persons arrested in Poland are forwarded to a central identification bureau located at Warsaw, which is under the direction of the Minister of the Interior. The records of this bureau comprising 585,000 prints on December 31, 1934, are classified according to the Klatt system.

The Criminal Identification Bureau under the jurisdiction of the Federal Police at Mexico City has over 1,700,000 fingerprint cards in its files and receives daily over 300 cards.

The Identification Bureau of the Department of Public Safety at Algiers, Algeria, had approximately 800,000 fingerprint cards in its files on March 18, 1935.

Among the other foreign identification agencies cooperating with the Federal Bureau of Investigation are the central bureau at Copenhagen, Denmark, which had 115,123 fingerprint cards on December 31, 1934; the central bureau at Berne, Switzerland, with 191,850 prints on December 31, 1934; the bureau at Cairo, Egypt, with its records of 738,548 prints on December 31, 1934; the central bureau at Lisbon, Portugal, with a collection numbering 181,000 prints; the bureau at Brussels, Belgium, which contained 193,687 prints in its files on December 31, 1934; the bureau at Wellington, New Zealand, which contained the fingerprints of 49,809 individuals on March 31, 1935; the bureau at Dublin, Ireland, which on March 1, 1935, had about 32,000 prints in its collection; and the bureau at Bridgetown, Barbados, British West Indies, with 2,510 fingerprint records on December 31, 1934.

In connection with the different methods of fingerprint classification employed in foreign countries, it is important to mention the Vucetich system which was devised by Juan Vucetich, noted Argentine dactyloscopist. This system has been adopted by the national bureaus of the various South American countries. Of the several important collections of fingerprints, Argentina, at Buenos Aires, has by far the largest bureau. The fingerprint system of identification there has been extended not only to persons having police records but to those obtaining passports, certificates of identity, government, bank and commercial positions as well as those engaged in other occupations. Over two million prints are in the files, one of the largest collections in the world.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is of the opinion that to provide for comprehensive identification service intensive efforts must be made to ascertain whether the persons whose fingerprint cards are referred to the Bureau have criminal records in foreign countries and whether Americans arrested abroad have been involved in illegal activities in the United States. It is felt that the development of this international exchange should prove to be a further step in the cause of more effective law enforcement, which is the objective of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The International Exchange of Fingerprints not only provides a Means for furnishing subject's complete criminal history for the assistance of Prosecuting Attorneys, Judges and Parcle Officials in their respective activities, but also is of the utmost importance as a medium whereby persons who are wanted in a country other than that in which they are arrested may be identified as fugitives. An interesting case of this character came to the attention of the Bureau in March, 1935, when one Chris Harrisson, who was being held for deportation by the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service at Chicago, Illinois, was found to be wanted for absconding with Bulgarian state funds in 1929. Harrisson's fingerprints were sent to Bulgaria in December, 1934, and the authorities in that country reported that this person had been chief of a post and telegraphic office in Bulgaria and that he had diverted state funds of the Postal Telegraph station. The report stated, further, that he left Bulgarian territory illegally and that in September, 1929, he was to have received a sentence of six years confinement. This information was furnished by the Bureau to the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service for use in the prosecution of deportation charges against Harrisson. Deportation proceedings were still pending in November, 1935.

When the fingerprints of the self-styled "Count Lustig", who was arrested by the United States Secret Service in May, 1935, for counterfeiting, were forwarded to the various National Identification Bureaus in Europe a record of fourteen arrests in foreign countries was disclosed. It appears that his first arrest was by the police authorities in Prague, Czechoslovakia, in 1908, on which occasion he was sentenced to serve two months for theft. Subsequently, he was arrested several times in France, Austria and Switzerland on such charges as embezzlement, swindling, theft and forgery. He was arrested more than twenty times in various cities throughout the United States. It is interesting to note that when he was taken into custody of the United States Secret Service in May, 1935, the Bureau's fingerprint files contained fugitive notices against his record for the Folice Departments at Kansas City, Missouri; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Chicago, Illinois; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and the Sheriff's Office at Spokane, Washington. In addition to these five active notices, the files disclosed that at various times in the past he had been a fugitive from ten law enforcement agencies in the United States. Furthermore, while being held awaiting prosecution on charges of counterfeiting, he escaped from the United States Detention Headquarters in New York City on September 1, 1935, but was recaptured soon thereafter. As a matter of further interest. the Bureau's files reflect that this person has used sixty-two aliases during his criminal career. This case, obviously, illustrates the efficacy of forwarding in the international exchange the fingerprints of subjects whose nationalities or records indicate they may have operated in foreign countries. so that complete criminal histories may be obtained.

In another case a communication was received in the Federal Bureau of Investigation from the American Express Company on October 30, 1934, accompanied by a set of fingerprints of one John Leslie Matson with the request that these fingerprints be compared with the fingerprints of one Albert C. Carson who was wanted by the American Express Company and the Police Department, Atlanta, Georgia, for forgery. The letter from the American Express Company stated that Matson was thought to be identical with the person whose apprehension they desired. It stated further that this person had been trailed from Vancouver, British Columbia, through the Far East and into Italy where he was arrested. In compliance with the request contained in the aforementioned letter these fingerprints were compared with the fingerprints of Carson and it was ascertained that Carson and Matson were identical. This advice WaS furnished promptly to the American Express Company.

Two days following the receipt of this person's fingerprints from the American Express Company, his fingerprints were received in the Bureau from the Superior School of Police, Central Service of Identification, Rome, Italy. Notification of Carson's fugitive status as well as nis entire criminal record was transmitted to the authorities at Rome.

Requests for information as to Matson's criminal record were also received from the authorities in Cairo, Egypt, and Canada. The communication from Cairo stated that this person was alleged to be a confidence man, check forger, negotiator of stolen traveller checks, dope fiend, and trader in narcotics.

In addition to being wanted by the Police Department, Atlanta, Georgia, and the American Express Company, a fugitive notice was being maintained against Matson's record to the effect that he was wanted at Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania, for a $10,000 stock swindle. The interested police officials in that city were notified of his arrest in Rome.

Information was received in the Bureau in August, 1935, that the fugitive was still in custody in Rome awaiting trial for falsification of a passport and assuming a false identity. In the communication conveying this report the Bureau was advised that the authorities in the United States had made notification that Carson's extradition from Rome would be demanded.

The international character of this person's criminal activities is clearly indicated by the facts set out above. His record in this country as contained in the files of the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, includes several arrests in the United States from 1913 to 1926, generally in connection with confidence game operations. He was on the black list of the Narcotic Bureau and as it is the practice to notify that Bureau of the arrest of any person on its black list, Carson's arrest in Rome was reported to the Narcotic Bureau. Additional notations appeared against his record to the effect that he had been arrested at Nice, France, on March 18, 1931, charged with trafficking in and being in possession of narcotics and had been sentenced to one year in prison on that charge.

The above case is a splendid example of the value of the international exchange of fingerprints when criminals who operate over many countries are involved. The efficacy of the fingerprint science, as demonstrated by the above case, is even more obvious in view of the fact that the fingerprint cards received in the Bureau from various police authorities throughout the world reflect that Carson had used twenty-one different names.

It will be observed from these cases that the action of the Bureau in the development of the plan to provide for the international exchange of fingerprints is producing very effective results. Also, it is an elaboration upon the services which the Bureau has given to all law enforcement agencies. The Bureau's criminal identification activities have been increased tremendously since it assumed this important work on July 1, 1924, when largely through the efforts of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the Bureau was authorized to receive, file, and exchange criminal identifying data, and as a nucleus for its work received a total of 810,188 fingerprint cards, which previously had comprised the collections of the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES INVITED TO ENLIST THE COOPERATION OF BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS IN CIVIL IDENTIFICATION ACTIVITIES

Although it has been very gratifying, indeed, to note the enthusiastic interest in civilian fingerprinting activities which has been apparent in recent months, the Federal Bureau of Investigation believes that some law enforcement officials may be losing sight of the opportunities for even greater progress in this field, which lie in enlisting the cooperation of business organizations.

Many large companies have already seen the advantages which lie in the protection afforded employees of the company who have their fingerprints placed in the Bureau's Civil Identification Section. For instance, an organization which has seen the value of this practice is a large express company in Chicago, Illinois. The fingerprints of 1,587 employees of this company are now in the Bureau's civil files. Close to 700 fingerprint cards containing the finger impressions of employees of an engineering company in Brocklyn, New York, are also in these files as silent witnesses, always available to establish definitely the identities of these persons, should the necessity therefor ever arise.

Although many companies in addition to those mentioned have forwarded the fingerprints of employees to the Bureau for retention in the Civil Identification Section, it is not believed that the wonderful opportunities for expansion of fingerprint activities among similar companies are fully appreciated. For this reason, the Bureau desires at this time to call attention to this situation and to earnestly enlist the support of law enforcement agencies in securing the cooperation of business organizations in this activity. As has been indicated in previous issues of this bulletin, the Bureau is glad to furnish appropriate supplies of blank personal identification fingerprint cards to be used in submitting to the Bureau the fingerprints of all civilians.

THE CONFESSION AND THIRD DEGREE METHODS

The law enforcement officer is charged with the responsibility of enforcing the law without tearing down fundamental rights of the individual, while discharging these duties.

Under the pressure of modern crime, the harassed peace officer is faced with the flaunting contempt of the calloused criminal. This aggravation causes some to genuinely feel that the fundamental rights, so zealously guarded by law, must be violated to meet the needs of handling organized crime. The problem is ably pointed out by the court in a recent decision wherein it was stated: "It is a very human failing, superinduced doubtless by constant dealings with the hardened criminal classes, which induces police officers to follow the popular attitude and presume the guilt of an accused person, rather than his innocence, which latter presumption the law enjoins upon the courts; nevertheless this popular presumption of guilt and the court-ruled and legal presumption of innocence cause trouble and misunderstandings in the administration of justice when they clash."

If the law enforcement officer is to show progress and maintain the respect of the people he must meet the condemnation of critics who maintain that "in fact, the getting of confessions is regarded nearly everywhere as a central point in police skill" and that "this particular skill certainly has developed at the expense of investigative energy and lawful detective technique," by proving these assertions to be unfounded in fact or grossly exaggerated. The poignant challenge that "when lynx-eyed departmental sleuths are baffled by a paucity of clues (generally furnished by stool pigeons) or when they are too stupid or lazy to gather material evidence against a prisoner, they transform their tipstaffs into divining rods, and work diligently on the suspect's skull until he 'comes clean'; rubber hose, which leaves no incriminating welt on face or body, being a favorite weapon with the confession snatchers" must be refuted by a record of convictions that stand upon evidence developed through persistent intelligent investigation. By the application of scientific principles to crime detection and criminal apprehension there is no need to resort to third degree methods to obtain convictions even in the case of the vicious mobster of today's organized crime.

The investigating officer who considers his job done after he obtains a confession is seriously lacking in knowledge of the requirements of his profession and would be rightfully rebuked by his superiors for having done a slipshod piece of work. Further, in fact the manner in which he obtained the confession and the circumstances leading up to the taking of the confession may have been of such a nature that not only has that effort been wasted but has done irreparable damage as well.

It will be well to look to this problem not only as a practical matter, but legally as well, since in the last resort the courts will decide whether or not the investigating officer has done his work satisfactorily. Briefly summarized, there are set cut hereafter, certain legal propositions that must be remembered in considering the subject of the value of confessions, viewed solely as evidence in themselves.

A confession has been defined as the voluntary declaration made by a person who has committed a felony or misdemeanor to another, acknowledging his agency or participation in the same. It is not equivalent of a statement, a declaration or an admission, but is restricted to an acknowledgment of guilt made by a person after the offense has been committed. The importance of determining whether a statement is or is not a confession arises from the rule requiring a confession to have been voluntarily made.

A review of the law discloses that a confession of guilt by the accused is admissible against him when, and only when, it was freely and voluntarily made without having been induced by the expectation of any promised benefit or by the fear of any threatened injury. This is the rule of the common law, affirmed by code or statute in some jurisdictions. The rule does not, however, require the exclusion of a confession because it was not spontaneously made. Whether a confession is voluntary depends largely upon the facts of the particular case. The sex, age, disposition, education, and previous training of the prisoner, his mental qualities, his physical health and his surroundings are matters to be considered.

The question naturally arises in the mind of the officer as to what he may do in respect to obtaining a confession. It is well settled that a confession will not be excluded because of a mere exhortation or adjuration to speak the truth. On the question whether an exhortation accompanied by an expression that it would be better for accused to speak the truth is sufficient to exclude a confession, the authorities are divided, some holding that it is, others that it is not. The real question is whether the language used in regard to speaking the truth, when taken in connection with the attending circumstances and with other language spoken in the same or in some prior interview, shows that the confession was made under the influence of some threat or promise, the confession being inadmissible where it was made under such influence, and being admissible where no threat or inducement was made or offered.

The cases hold that a confession is not rendered inadmissible by the mere fact that it was elicited by questions put by police officers or others, even though the questions assumed the prisoner's guilt, or although they were roughly asked. Nor is the admissibility affected by the fact that when the confession was made the defendant was handcuffed or shackled, or in some manner bound or tied. That defendant was in close confinement does not exclude a confession which appears to have been free and voluntary. Some cases have also held that the fact that friends and family of defendant are denied admission to the jail until after the confession was made, does not render the confession inadmissible.

However, the practice of taking into custody and detaining persons merely suspected of crime, as well as confining persons accused of crime in dark cells for the purpose of extorting confessions from them, and the practice of inflicting or subjecting a prisoner to mental and physical abuses commonly labeled the third degree are condemned by the courts, and in determining whether or not a confession was made voluntarily. it is proper to take into consideration the fact of imprisonment, or of illegal custody, or of confinement in a dark cell, as well as the fact that accused was in irons or chains.

For example a confession must be rejected as involuntary where it appears "that nine officers, collectively, or individually, or in pairs or trios, 'sweated' defendant continuously from two o'clock in the afternoon until one o'clock next morning, at which time, after the police captain and others had told defendant it would 'be best for him to tell the truth,' he made and signed the alleged confession. The progressive police administrator of today is well aware of the fact that such methods do not lend themselves to successful law enforcement.

The question is often raised as to advising a prisoner of his constitutional rights. In this respect a review of the case law discloses that in the absence of a statute requiring caution or warning, the fact that a voluntary confession was made without accused having been cautioned or warned that it might be used against him does not effect its admissibility. Except in some jurisdictions it is not the duty of a police officer, in the absence of a statute, to caution a prisoner as to the consequences of making a statement, if the statement is voluntary, but merely to refrain from inducing him to make a statement. The courts agree, however, that undoubtedly the better and safer course for an officer to pursue, when a prisoner is about to make a statement, is to warn him that it may be used against him. This caution is well stated in a recent case. "While the law does not require that the defendant should be cautioned as to his rights to remain silent and of the fact that statements made by him will be used against him, it is always better that the officers give such warning in order to avoid suspicion of improper inducement."

The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Wan v. United States, 226 U.S.1, definitely laid down the rule that "In the federal courts, the requisite of voluntariness is not satisfied by establishing merely that the confession was not induced by a promise or a threat. A confession is voluntary in law if, and only if, it was, in fact, voluntarily made. A confession may have been voluntary, although it was made to police officers, while in custody, and in answer to an examination conducted by them. But a confession obtained by compulsion must be excluded. Whatever may have been the character of the compulsion."

A cursory glance at the law concerning the admissibility of confessions in evidence clearly demonstrates that there is a great probability that a confession will be inadmissible due to some factor that may have "the character of compulsion." The law enforcement officer should therefore devote a greater degree of attention to scientific investigation that will result in the development of evidence that is irrebuttably incriminating.

RADIO

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, appreciative of the tremendous value that radio is to law enforcement officers today and cognizant of the greatly increased number of transmitting stations installed by police for rapid communication purposes, particularly with mobile units, is completing arrangements whereby the Bureau will equip its automobiles throughout the country with radio.

The equipment will be specially designed high fidelity, high selectivity, short wave radio receiving sets for the express purpose of tuning in on local stations of police departments and other law enforcement agencies as the Bureau's Special Agents travel from district to district by automobile.

Upon the installation of this equipment instructions will be issued to Special Agents that at all times, while they are within the receiving range of the transmitting station of a local law enforcement agency. they must constantly keep tuned in on that station in order that they may be readily reached by the local agencies should their assistance be needed or should their headquarters office desire to relay an important message to them.

Generally police receiving sets are built to be tuned in only on the single frequency of the police transmitter within the district in which they operate. The Bureau's automobiles, traveling as they do from one police district to another, must have special receiving apparatus capable of receiving the signals on a great number of different frequencies of the various transmitting stations within which range they may be operating at the moment. For this purpose, it was found necessary to especially design a set to cover frequency ranges continuously variable from 1,575 kilocycles to 1,750 kilocycles and from 2,100 kilocycles to 2,500 kilocycles. At the same time it was necessary to provide for adequately locking the apparatus to any one particular frequency within the range of the receiver to prevent detuning through car vibration and also to provide compensation for any drift off the frequency.

POLICE RADIO STATIONS

The records of the Federal Communications Commission disclose that there are now 208 Municipal Police Departments and 62 State Police radio broadcasting stations licensed, operating on regularly authorized wave lengths of from 1500 to 2000 kilocycles. Although all states have not adopted State Police radio, those state organizations utilizing this means of communication are noted to have transmitters set up in convenient locations throughout the state.

TIRE TRACKS FBI REFERENCE COLLECTION

Alert law enforcement officials in the past although not equipped with the recent aids in scientific crime detection, have concentrated upon the development of evidence which would unequivocally identify a suspected person with a particular crime. One of the principle places of search for such evidence was the scene of the crime to see whether the subject left some evidence of his identity either in coming to or leaving the place at which the crime was committed. In those days when man traveled by foot, footprints were sought, later with the advent of travel on horseback, it being reasonable to assume that the suspect may have found it advantageous to speedily escape by horse, hoofprints were of assistance in identifying the subject. Today, the automobile affords the criminal a common means of escape and for the automobile's identifying marks we look for tire tracks as an aid in leading us to the perpetrator of a crime.

There are many interesting cases in which tire tracks have played an important part in the solving of a crime. The recent case of State vs Simons, 20 Pac. (2d) 844 is being set out herein as being of possible interest due to the fact that both hoofprints and tire tracks were utilized in obtaining a conviction.

Frank Simons along with several other defendants was found guilty of cattle theft. The testimony adduced at the trial was to the effect that the stolen cattle were loaded at an abandoned ranch known as "Hick's place" where Simons and one Stingley, on horseback, had driven them. It had been raining and the roads were somewhat muddy. Before reaching the highway one of the trucks, driven by one Hoop, carrying the cattle, stalled at the foot of a pitch on the dirt road at a point near what is known as "Ide's place." Ide came to help Hoop with his truck and while standing there, Simons, driving a Ford truck loaded with sheep passed without stopping. Hoop's truck stalled again three or four miles beyond "Ide's place." This time Simons coming along in the Ford truck helped him get started. A gasoline attendant, at the highway intersection with the dirt road, testified that Hoop and Simons with cattle and sheep in their respective trucks had stopped at the station on the morning in question.

A few days after the cattle were stolen, the owner, Danielson and B. P. Herman tracked them from the pasture from which they were taken about four miles north to the Hick's place, where they were loaded. They both testified that the cattle were driven by two horsemen. Herman testified that he recognized the hoof marks of one of the horses as those of a horse owned by Simons and which he had seen ridden by Simons on a previous occasion. Danielson further testified that he followed the tracks of the truck to the point where they entered the highway. He also observed the tracks of the second car at both points where Hoop got stalled.

Photographs of the tracks made by this car were taken, at the point where Hoop was first stalled, and the photographs were admitted in evidence. Testimony was also given to the effect that the tracks on the ground and those shown by the photographs were made by a car with tires of the same kind as those on Simons' Ford truck.

It was contended that there was error in permitting the witness Herman to testify as to the identity of one of the horses that was used in driving the cattle from the Danielson pasture to the "Hick's place." In ruling against this contention the court stated "They contend the testimony was a conclusion or expression of opinion. We do not so view it. The testimony was to the effect that, some time prior, Simons had ridden a horse into a field where the witness was working; that it was a larger horse than any ridden in that part of the country; that the imprints of its hoofs were larger and had individual characteristics different from other horses; and that the imprints made by one of the horses driving the cattle were made by the horse Simons had ridden into the witness' field on the occasion referred to. The testimony was a statement of fact susceptible of knowledge. Its weight was for the jury to determine."

"For similar reasons it was not error to admit in evidence photographs of the tire tracks. The make of the tires on Simons' Ford truck was shown, and that the tread on the two front tires was the same, but different from the tread on the two rear tires, which also had the same tread. It was shown by the testimony that the marks, of which the photographs were taken, were made by tires (on front and rear wheels) of the same make as on Simons' truck."

In the case set out above photographs of tire marks suspected as being those from Simons' Ford truck were checked against impressions made by the tires on his truck early in the investigation, corroborating other facts pointing to his guilt. Often the opportunity does not present itself for this type of identification to be effected in the first stages of an investigation. There may just be a tire track left at the scene of the crime from which it is hoped to identify the automobile used and thus possibly develop leads pointing to the perpetrators of the crime. Ir such cases the first problem is to determine the make of `tire that made the track.

In this connection it must be remembered that a tire leaves a positive design on the ground after having passed over some wet portion of the road or ground, marking its wet trace over a dry portion similar to a printing process. Whereas, if the same tire stamps its trace in mud or a soft substance, the tracks become a mould or a negative impression. The nature of the surface and type of tire track should be noted and pointed out in submitting photographs to the Technical Laboratory for identification purposes.

There are several methods of registering tracks and imprints. Those means available in police technique such as drawing, photography and moulage should be utilized, the particular method being determined by the physical condition of the case to be handled. In instances of a positive tire mark design, metrical photography would be the most desirable method of registration, but since it is not always possible to have this special apparatus on hand, an ordinary camera may be just as useful if the precaution is taken to place a graded rule very close to the prints to be photographed, thereby giving a definite scale in the photograph itself. If the tire track is a negative, the best obtainable photograph should first be obtained, taking care to provide for scale, and then a plaster of paris cast should be made for a further and more accurate preservation of the evidence.

The photograph or cast having been obtained, it is now possible to send the same to the FBI Technical Laboratory to be checked against a file of tire tracks which is maintained and now consists of approximately 1800 specimens of tire patterns covering tire models manufactured by both Canadian and American tire manufacturers, rebuilders and remoulders. The great possibility of obtaining an identification as to the make of tire leaving the track, through checking with the FBI specimen file is manifest. Once having determined the make of the tire or tires leaving their traces the investigator is greatly aided by this additional information that may be of material assistance in solving his case and apprehending the perpetrators of the crime.

Later, when the automobile is found, specimens of tire tracks from all parts of the tire's surface should be obtained and matched up with the tracks found at the scene of the crime. This will be a valuable bit of supplemental and corroborating evidence which will prove to be a material aid to the prosecutor.

CIVILIAN FINGERPRINT CARDS

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is now receiving hundreds of cards daily for filing in the Civil Identification Section. Many of these cards are submitted in large groups by police departments or other law enforcement agencies.

It is suggested that where this practice is followed, some indication be given as to the identity of the official agency so that the Bureau may acknowledge their receipt. A letter of enclosure or merely a short note will suffice. This suggestion is offered because frequently it is not possible for the Bureau to determine the identity of the sender of these prints, with the result that they are acknowledged to the individuals represented thereby.

A GUIDE FOR PREPARING ANNUAL POLICE REPORTS

For many years the importance of maintaining detailed records the conduct of business organizations has been recognized by ecutives. There is a similar need for the maintenance of recning to the activities of a police organization, records which vailable facts essential to the efficient administration of the

The mportance of such information was given recognition by tional Association of Chiefs of Police when they initiated in ment looking toward the uniform compilation of crime data by cies throughout the entire country. This movement resulted in n of a system of recording and summarizing crime data, as set nanual entitled "Uniform Crime Reporting."

In connection with the development of that project, the Comniform Crime Records of the International Association of Chiefs repared the pamphlet entitled "A Guide for Preparing Annual rts." This pamphlet was published and distributed in 1929, but has for some time been exhausted. In order that this valuable may be made available to all interested law enf rcement ofe FBI is, with the permission of the Committee on Uniform Crime printing the Guide and it is expected that it will be available ution some time during January, 1936. The Guide will be mailed ce departments of all cities with more than 5,000 inhabitants, addition be furnished to interested individuals engaged in law work, upon request.

The following is quoted from the foreword to the Guide:

"Some police departments do not now issue their annual reports in printed form. While it is not essential that a report following the lines here proposed should be printed, the Committee believes that the publication and general distribution of such a report will help to secure the interest and cooperation of municipal officials and the public at large, and thereby contribute to the steady improvement of police service. In any event, every police xecutive should have such information readily available for administrative purposes."

BLOOD TESTS FOR ALCOHOL DETERMINATION

The following, or second in a series of articles is published to acquaint those interested with the several methods of procedure practiced by analysts in their determination of alcohol in blood and other body fluids.

With the increased consumption of alcoholic beverages and the overwhelming increase in auto fatalities attributed directly or indirectly to the presence of alcohol many laboratories are now seeking ways and means of readily determining the presence of alcohol in blood and other body fluids to determine whether the victim, the suspect or both have been partaking of such beverages.

Many methods have been employed and several modifications of original applications have been developed. Among the several methods finding wide application has been the "Nicloux Method" as established by Dr. Maurice Nicloux in his thesis dated, Paris 1900.

The technique of procedure is based upon the change of color of a bichromate solution in the presence of sulphuric acid when treated with such organic compounds as ethyl alcohol, methyl alcohol, ether, glycerine and allied compounds.

Nicloux found that his method could be applied to blood, urine, liver, kidney and stomach contents. He utilized the blood of individuals after death and found that urine gave satisfactory results and was easier to obtain when the person was alive.

The method employed is referred to as a steam distillation process. In the performance of this test one flask is used to hold pure distilled water which is the source of the steam, a second flask (a 300 cc. Florence type flask) into which is introduced the material to be analyzed which in turn is connected to a Liebig condenser which condenses the steam vapors which are collected in a graduated cylinder at the end of the Liebig. All joints are tight using glass tubing with a minimum of space between connections held in position with pure rubber tubing which has been previously boiled in distilled water to remove all adhering powders and finishes given the rubber in the process of manufacture which might alter the results of the tests.

Technique: 10 cc. of blood or urine or 10 grams of tissue and about 60 cc. of a 1/100 solution of picric acid is introduced into the Florence flask. Note: Many technicians prefer to use tartaric acid in place of picric acid.

A quantity of pure distilled water is introduced into the second flask and all connections made between flasks and condensers.

Heat in the form of Bunsen burners is applied beneath both flasks and the contents heated to a gentle boil. The distillation is continued until 1 cc. of distillate is collected for each gram of tissue or each cc. of fluid used. The distillate must be carefully measured by a calibrated pipet.

Five cc. of distillate is transferred to a 30 or 50 cc. Erlenmeyer flask.

Add 3 cc. of concentrated sulphuric acid, from a burette.

Titrate with standard potassium bichromate solution, containing 19 grams to the liter, using a burette graduated to 0.05 cc.

The bichromate is added a few drops at a time, shaking well after each addition, until the initial blue-green color is changed to a yellow. This point indicates the end of the reaction. Precaution: Several duplicates should be conducted on each test as the color change is gradual.

Calculation: 1 cc. of bichromate corresponds to 0.005 cc. of absolute alcohol, therefore, 1 cc. of bichromate is equivalent to 0.1% (in terms of cc.) of alcohol in the distillate, as 5 cc. of the distillate was used in the titration.

By multiplying this figure by the volume of distillate the total amount of alcohol in the distillate is obtained. By multiplying this figure by the weight of the organ. if known, or the total estimated weight of fluid in the body, the total quantity may be determined.

As previously stated above, the substances react in a similar manner to other substances and the results obtained may not truly represent the amount of alcohol present. With suitable precautions taken in the making of all connections and careful control of the temperature satisfactory results may be obtained.

It is hoped that a study of the above described method on the part of law enforcement agencies in this country interested in the problem of determining the alcohol intoxication of an individual will be found helpful.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation contemplates publishing several additional articles as reported to it by different technicians. The Bureau prefers not to offer comment on the various techniques which will be published as reported, preferring to make the original material available for such value as may be found.

WANTED NOTICES

Advantages of Sending to the FBI

The fingerprints of one Franklin Ball, who had made application for a pistol permit in Pasadena, California, were received from the police Department in that city on December 3, 1935, with the request that the Bureau furnish advice of any criminal record that might be disclosed through a search of the fingerprint files. The fingerprints were searched through the files of the Bureau's Identification Division and it was found that this applicant for a pistol permit was wanted as a parole violator by the Sheriff's Office at Saint Paul, Minnesota. He had been arrested in that city in June, 1932, for desertion and in July of that year was sentenced to the State Penitentiary, but his sentence was suspended and he was placed on probation for five years.

In January, 1935, the Sheriff's Office at Saint Paul, Minnesota, requested the Bureau to post a wanted notice against this subject's record for violation of parole. As soon as the fingerprints which had been submitted by the Police Department at Pasadena, California, in connection with this person's application for a pistol permit, were identified with those of the parole violator from Saint Paul, Minnesota, a telegram was dispatched to the sheriff at Saint Paul informing him of the application which the fugitive had made at Pasadena, California. The Chief of Police in the latter city was furnished a report of the fact that this subject was wanted for violation of parole and a further record of an arrest by the Police Department at Flint, Michigan, in October, 1926, for larceny from a building.

The importance of sending wanted notices to the FBI cannot be over emphasized. This service, maintained for all law enforcement agencies, makes it possible to have the wanted persons' fingerprints checked against all fingerprints coming into the Bureau each day.

METHOD OF IDENTIFICATION Missing Persons - Unknown Corpses

An interesting, effective method of identifying missing persons and unknown corpses, as used by the Central Bureau of Criminal Records, Brussels, Belgium, has been received by the Federal Bureau of Investigation from the Honorable F. E. Louwage, Commissioner-in-chief of Criminal Assignments, Brussels, Belgium.

The article explaining the method used is being set out below for the assistance of law enforcement agencies in this country, who may find a practical application or helpful suggestion augmenting systems now being utilized by them.

"A few years ago, at the time of the discovery of an abandoned package in the night time on a public road of Brussels, and containing the calcinated remains of a corpse, we were astonished at the number of persons reported missing. Thereupon an investigation proved that the majority of these persons had returned home without the parents notifying the police; others had simply changed their place of domicile and the police had failed to enter a notation of this fact. From that time on, periodically, we make revisions in the list of missing persons; a verification is made if they have not returned in the interval.

"It was by proceeding by means of a methodical search through the list of missing persons, that through special types of false teeth, the remains of the corpse were finally identified as belonging to a woman who had disappeared a few months before.

"But yet it is quite seldom that in cases of identification of unknown corpses that there are only remains or pieces that are discovered. Generally it is the case of a corpse found hanging along the way of a railroad or highway, in the woods or in a stream of water. In the great majority of cases the bodies are almost whole.

"We have devised no method of publishing the descriptions of missing persons in our scheme of investigations for the identification of corpses. But, in the presence of difficulties which showed up, we decided that it was necessary to use a certain method in these investigations, in view of the descriptions and their diversity. Here then, is how we have set up the method of identifying unknown corpses, in the Central Bureau of Criminal Records, situated in the Criminal Police, Court of Justice of Brussels.

"We start with the principle that in the majority of cases of unknown corpses found that may be described, the police who find them can send us immediately the following information: 1. Apparent age; 2. The neight as exact as possible; 3. The description and especially all visible marks.

"Now, we have decided that the classifying of missing persons under an index of special classification or by name is of no help to us. Therefore, a separation of male and female cards has been made. Do not think that we have therefore divided the number of missing persons into two equal parts. You will notice that, on the contrary, women have more reasons for disappearing than men.... Nevertheless, here we have our first break up.

"In each of these classifications (males and females), we class the cards by age, as follows: those born from 1935 to 1931, from 1930 to 1926, from 1925 to 1921, from 1920 to 1916 and from that point on for each period of five years.

"After that, in each of these categories, we file the cards according to height (expressed in centimeters) of each subject, that is to say, in series of 5 centimeters; from 150 to 154 cm., from 155 to 159 cm., from 160 to 165 cm., etc.

"Furthermore, on each card we make a notation of the general characteristics of description, and especially the visible marks, such as, scars, moles, tattooings, etc.

"We also put down the date of disappearance.

"Corpses, which in spite of investigations and searches, were not identified are also indexed amongst these cards: according to sex, apparent age and height, following the same method as described above. Furthermore, we add on these cards, the description and visible marks, as well as the date when the body was found.

"This index is necessary for it frequently happens that the body of a person is found long after a parent or friend notifies the police of the disappearance.

"It follows that every time it is reported that a person has disappeared for some time, it is well to verify if that person is not listed in unidentified bodies.

"Now then, what is the process of identifying an unknown body? Let us suppose that the Criminal Police of the Court of Justice of Brussels receive a telegram from the constabulary saying: 'body found, Campine Canal, male about 55 years old, height 176 centimeters, light greying blonde hair, high forehead, clean shaven, light blue eyes, straight nose (etc.).., straight scar 4 cm. long horizontal to and 2 cm. from the left nostril, large wart on the back of right hand.' On the receipt of this telegram, the employee goes to the male files; in these he looks at the cards of individuals (according to age); born from 1885 to 1881 and from 1880 to 1874; in each of these groups he examines the height class of 175 to 179 cm. He looks at the descriptions: hair, eyes etc., and especially the visible marks.

"It is rare that he does not identify the corpse in five minutes.

"This index system has rendered astonishing results since 1928 when it was established. Before this system was in use - which method has since been adopted by certain foreign bureaus - the number of corpses remaining unidentified was considerable. At the present time the number has become very low."

CURTIS HARRIS

FINGERPRINTS IDENTIFY SUBJECT ARRESTED FOR TRAIN RIDING AS RECENT ESCAPE FROM PENITENTIARY

One Curtis Harris, who had been received at the State Penitentiary, Richmond, Virginia, in June, 1935, to serve a term of six years for housebreaking, escaped from that institution on October 5, 1935. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was notified of this escape, and a wanted notice was posted against Harris' fingerprint record in the Bureau's files.

A fingerprint card was received in the Bureau on October 12, 1935, from the Special Agent of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company at Hinton, West Virginia, reporting that one Jimmie Misick had been arrested at Hinton on October 9, 1935, for train riding and had been fined and sentenced to serve 10 days in jail. These fingerprints were searched through the files of the Bureau's Identification Division and Jimmie Misick was identified as Curtis Harris, the escaped convict from the State Penitentiary at Richmond, Virginia. The Warden of that institution was informed immediately by telegram that the fugitive was in custody at Hinton, West Virginia. Shortly thereafte- the Bureau was advised that this subject was returned to the Virginia Penitentiary.

It is especially interesting to observe in this case that the fugitive was arrested at Hinton only four days after his escape from prison, and that although he had adopted an alias his identity as the escaped convict was established through the Bureau's fingerprint files, thereby resulting in his return to prison. This case is typical of the many interesting cases in which persons arrested by railroad police officers on minor charges are identified by fingerprints as fugitives from justice.

ARTHUR ROGERS

CONVICT WHO ESCAPED FROM TWO PENITENTIARIES WHILE UNDER LONG-TERM SENTENCES IDENTIFIED AS FUGITIVE BY MEANS OF FINGERPRINTS

In July, 1927, one Arthur Rogers was received at the State Penitentiary, Raleigh, North Carolina, to serve a term of 30 years for second degree burglary. Approximately two months after he entered upon this sentence he escaped, and remained at large until January, 1929, when he was arrested under the name of George Roberts by the Police Department at Newport News, Virginia, on six counts of burglary. The North Carolina authorities had advised the Bureau of this subject's escape from the State Penitentiary at Raleigh and, accordingly, information of his arrest at Newport News was furnished the Superintendent of the North Carolina Penitentiary. However, he was not returned to that institution, inasmuch as he was found guilty of the offenses for which he had been arrested at Newport News and was sentenced to serve a term of 18 years in the State Penitentiary at Richmond, Virginia. He escaped from that institution in July, 1934, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, being advised of his escape, posted a wanted notice against his fingerprint record in the identification files.

A fingerprint card was received in the Eureau on November 1, 1935, from the Police Department at Winston-Salem, North Carolina, reporting the arrest of one Richard Dale on October 30, 1935, for assault with a deadly weapon. These fingerprints were searched through the files of the Bureau's Identification Division and it was found that Richard Dale was identical with Arthur Rogers, alias George Roberts, the subject who was wanted for escaping from the State Penitentiaries at Raleigh, North Carolina, and Richmond, Virginia. On the same day that the fingerprints were received in the Bureau from the Police Department at Winston-Salem, North Carolina, telegraphic advice of the fugitive's arrest in that city was furnished the Warden of the State Penitentiary at Richmond, Virginia. The Superintendent of the State Penitentiary at Raleigh, North Carolina, was also notified of this arrest. The Chief of Police at Winston-Salem was furnished a complete report of this subject's criminal record. including, of course, the fact that he was wanted for escaping from the institutions mentioned. On November 8, 1935, information was received in the Bureau from the officials of the State Penitentiary at Richmond, Virginia, that the fugitive had been returned to that institution.

The above case was but one of 491 during November, 1935, in which the Bureau's fingerprint files were the means of identifying as fugitives persons who were arrested on charges bearing no relation to their fugitive status. It is particularly interesting to note in this case that this subject was an escaped convict from two penitentiaries, and it is assumed that a detainer will be filed by the North Carolina authorities so that upon the completion of his sentence at the State Penitentiary, Richmond, Virginia, he will be returned to the North Carolina State Penitentiary to complete the thirty-year sentence which was imposed upon him in 1927.
