United States Bureau of Investigation

John Edgar Hoover, Director

Washington, D. C.

VOL. 2 No. 5

MAY 1, 1933

The United States Bureau of Investigation is charged with the duty of investigating violations of the laws of the United States and collecting evidence in cases in which the United States is or may be a party in interest.

The Bureau does not have investigative jurisdiction over violations of the National Prohibition, Counterfeiting, Narcotic, Customs, Immigration, or Postal Laws.

However, the United States Bureau of Investigation will immediately institute investigations of alleged violations of Federal Laws other than those listed above.

The following list indicates some of the major violations over which the Bureau has investigative jurisdiction:-

National Motor Vehicle Theft Act

National Bankruptcy Act

White Slave Traffic Act

Impersonation of Government Officials

Larceny of Goods in Interstate Commerce

Cases involving transportation in interstate or foreign commerce of any persons who have been kidnapped

Theft, Embezzlement or Illegal Possession of Government Property

Antitrust Laws

National Bank and Federal Reserve Act Violations, such as embezzlement, abstraction or misapplication of funds

Crimes on any kind of Government reservation, including Indian Reservations or in any Government building or other Government property

Neutrality violations, including the shipment of arms to friendly nations

Frauds against the Government

Perjury, embezzlement, or bribery in connection with Federal Statutes or officials

Crimes on the high seas

The location of persons who are fugitives from justice by reason of violations of the Federal Laws over which the Bureau has jurisdiction, of escaped Federal prisoners, and parole and probation violators.

It will be appreciated if information in the possession of law-enforcement officials concerning the above listed violations is promptly forwarded to the Special Agent in Charge of the nearest office of the United States Bureau of Investigation. If the information indicates that immediate action is necessary, telegrams marked "Government Rate Collect" or telephone calls will be accepted. The address of each of the Field offices of this Bureau appears on the inside back cover of this bulletin.

enforcement officers, in particular, to become more familiar with the detailed operations in connection with the Bureau's work, and perhaps at the same time to feel a degree of pride in the accomplishments which have been effected due to the splendid cooperation between the peace officers of the nation and the United States Bureau of Investigation.

During the time that the Fair will be in progress, there will likewise be held at Chicago the annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. It is sincerely hoped that members of this association and all other regularly constituted law-enforcement officials attending the Exposition at Chicago will pay a visit to the United States Government Building and view the exhibit which will be arranged there. An attendant will be on duty and will be pleased to cooperate in every way possible in order that those officials not already participating in the identification project of this Bureau will find an incentive to avail themselves of this service, and that those who are already contributing to this project may find some way to increase the benefits that are available for them. It is also hoped that as a result of your visit at this exhibit you may find some suggestion which you can offer which will serve to increase the service which this Bureau can render in our united warfare against crime and criminals. Such suggestions are always welcome, and it is hoped that you will not hesitate at any time to afford the Bureau the benefit of your ideas along this line. In fact, it is through this type of cooperation that all of us can hope to make progress in the future, not being content to rest on past accomplishments, but rather to make the future progress of such a character as to be of more benefit and greater service.

Perhaps there is no form of endeavor more completely dependent upon cooperation for its success than that of law-enforcement. In serving the people of America and in ministering to their needs as public servants, we, the law-enforcement officers of the nation, find ourselves increasingly interdependent and in recognizing our mutual needs and realizing the types of service which we find available among the various law-enforcement agencies throughout the country, we find ourselves being brought more closely together in our united efforts to protect the life, liberty and property of the American people. It is because of this desire to render the greatest degree of cooperation within its jurisdiction that this Bureau is desirous of acquainting peace officers of the nation with its functions and its opportunities to be of increasingly more effective service.

Your inquiries, as well as suggestions, will be appreciated.

CIVIL IDENTIFICATION

It is probably because fingerprints first came into widespread usage in law enforcement work that the general public has associated this indispensable means of identification with crime and criminals. When considering the many identification bureaus throughout the world, the Identification Division of the United States Bureau of Investigation at Washington, D. C., is recognized nationally and internationally as possessing the largest reservoir or source of criminal identifying data in existence. It has 3,483,629 criminal fingerprints and 4,594,224 index cards in its collection. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1932, 573,731 fingerprint cards were received in the Bureau and 39% of these were identified with prior records. At this time approximately 2,200 additional cards are being received in the Bureau daily from 5,689 contributing law enforcement agencies in the United States and foreign countries, and the subjects of over 45% of these cards are found to have prior records when they are searched in the files.

It is interesting to observe further that about 350 fugitives wanted for all types of offenses by various local, state and Federal law enforcement agencies are identified monthly when current fingerprints are being examined in the Bureau. These criminal identification activities of the United States Bureau of Investigation, however, by no means represent or reflect the full scope of its operations, as it performs diversified functions in the conduct of certain civil identifying activities incident to its criminal work.

The Bureau's activities in the civil identification field may be divided into three general groups:

- A. Determining whether applicants for positions have prior criminal records.
- B. Identifying unknown deceased persons or amnesia victims.
- C. Ascertaining the whereabouts of necessary witnesses or prospective defendants in civil suits.

These interesting civil phases of the Bureau's fingerprint work are covered more fully below.

When the records contained in the Bureau's files were found to possess such great value for criminal purposes, many law enforcement agencies initiated the practice of routing or clearing through the Bureau, fingerprints of applicants for positions to determine whether they had previous criminal records. In addition, various branches of the armed services of the United States, upon occasion, have cleared their fingerprints through the Bureau in this manner, identifications averaging 5% of all these prints handled. The United States Civil Service Commission adopted this practice about four years ago. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, one person in every thirteen fingerprinted by the Civil Service Commission was found to have a criminal record, and during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1930, one in every fourteen persons fingerprinted was found to have been arrested and fingerprinted somewhere in the United States because of unlawful conduct. In a large number of cases it was determined that the persons whose offenses were detected through fingerprints, had given untruthful answers to questions on the application blanks. The offenses detected covered practically the entire range of misdemeanor and crime, from disorderly conduct to bigamy, counterfeiting, arson, burglary and murder. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1931, one person in every twenty-two fingerprinted by the Commission was found to have a criminal record, and during the fiscal year 1932, approximately one in every seventy was found to have a criminal record. About 60% of these identifications were made in the Identification Division of the United States Bureau of Investigation. The decrease in the percentage of identifications established may be attributed to the fact that the Civil Service Commission increased its fingerprinting activities in 1931, and further, to the possibility that many persons who had previous criminal records, knowing of the Commission's policy in searching applicant prints to determine criminal records, refrained from applying for Civil Service positions.

The above results were so favorable that the Civil Service Fingerprint Division was consolidated with that of the United States Bureau of Investigation on July 1, 1932, and the Bureau now maintains all of the Civil Service identification files. A considerable saving of funds was effected in the consolidation of the two fingerprint bureaus described because the additional work devolving upon the employees of the United States Bureau of Investigation consisted primarily of the filing of the cards which previously had been searched in the Bureau's technical files, and no additional personnel was required.

Many interesting cases have been brought to light in connection with the search of the fingerprint cards of applicants. There is a case which was revealed in July of 1929 when an individual at Detroit, Michigan, made application for a position as a Federal Prohibition Agent. When his fingerprints were referred to the United States Bureau of Investigation for search, it was found that he was an escaped prisoner from the Texas Prison at Huntsville, where he had been serving a five-year term for robbery and burglary. As a result of the Bureau's identification, this individual was returned to the Texas Prison to serve the remainder of his term. There is also the case of another Civil Service applicant whose record came to the Bureau's attention in the summer of 1932. On his fingerprint card this applicant stated he had no criminal record but the Bureau's files disclosed that in 1905 he had been committed to a penitentiary in a distant state to serve a life term for the crime of murder in the first degree. Further inquiries initiated in connection with this case indicated that the individual in question had escaped from the Penitentiary in 1913. However, while the inquiries were in process, he moved, leaving no forwarding address. The fingerprints in these two cases, received under different names, were identified solely through an examination of fingerprint characteristics. It is interesting to observe also that during July, 1929, the fingerprints of 81 applicants for positions in the Los Angeles, California, Police Department were searched, and 7 were found to have prior records, including one manslaughter, one hold-up, and one grand theft. During the summer of 1932 the Police Department at Mount Vernon, New York, referred to the Bureau the fingerprint cards of 299 applicants for the position of policeman. Seven of these individuals were found to have prior criminal records in the Bureau's files, one of them having been convicted to serve a term of one year for desertion from the army.

The second class of civil prints described is that with reference to the identification of unknown deceased persons or amnesia victims. The Bureau's work in examining fingerprint cards forwarded by law enforcement officers in the cases of persons who have been found dead, either from violence or natural causes, or of individuals suffering from loss of memory, necessarily is usually confined to an examination of its own criminal records. It follows, therefore, that unless a person has been involved in some criminal activities, an identification cannot be established in the Bureau's files unless perchance his fingerprints may correspond with one of the 153,908 Civil Service prints now in the Bureau's possession. Indicative of the scope of the Bureau's work in the establishment of identifications of unknown deceased persons, there was a rather unusual identification effected in December, 1930, when an individual endeavored to effect a robbery at Huntsville, Alabama, and was killed by a shopkeeper's wife. This person was found to be identical with an escaped prisoner from the North Carolina State Penitentiary at Raleigh. There is the case also of the person who committed suicide in an Iowa city in November of 1930. When his fingerprint card was searched in the Bureau's files it was found he had been arrested previously in South Dakota, and the Iowa officials were enabled to trace his relatives from the point where he had been taken into custody previously. There is also the case which came to the Bureau's attention in August of 1931, wherein an unidentified person was fatally wounded by a police officer while engaged in robbing a gasoline filling station in an Indiana city. This person in turn killed the police officer who was attempting to take him into custody. It was found that he had been released only a short time before from a Wisconsin Reformatory where he had been serving a previous term for burglary in the night time. There is another case which was referred to this Bureau recently wherein through a fingerprint identification a person living in North Carolina, who attracted wide attention through claiming to be a former prominent member of the Lafayette Esquadrielle reported killed in France, was proven to be a deserter from the United States Navy and not possessed of a World War record. These are routine cases gleaned from examining the fingerprint files of the United States Bureau of Investigation which establishes numerous similar identifications monthly.

Within the third class described above whereby prospective defendants or missing witnesses are located, there is the case which came to the Bureau's notice in April of 1931, when the officials of the United States Veterans Bureau, upon transmitting a fingerprint card from one of the armed services of the United States, requested that the identification files of the United States Bureau of Investigation be searched in an effort to locate a missing disabled World War veteran. When the Bureau's files were examined, it was found that this individual under another name had been arrested in 1930 in a Mississippi city and committed to a state hospital for the insane. In September of 1931, an identification was effected in the Bureau's Identification Division whereby a material witness, i.e., the insured, in a War Risk Insurance case was located through fingerprints. The action undertaken by the Bureau in this matter enabled the Federal Government to successfully defend a $10,000 suit brought against it under the presumption that the former soldier was deceased. He had been missing for over seven years. In September of 1932, a similar case was brought to the Bureau's attention wherein another veteran had been missing for a similar period. The Bureau's files were searched and when it was found that this person had been arrested in an Ohio city in 1930, the presumption of death was rebutted. The amount involved in this case was $1565.00, in the nature of an Adjusted Compensation Certificate. During November of 1932 a further case of this character was brought to the Bureau's attention and a search of the files reflected that the missing veteran was identical with a person arrested by the United States Marshal in a western state during 1930, charged with a violation of the Prohibition Laws. The amount involved in this case was $1,008, the same also being the amount payable to the veteran on an Adjusted Service Certificate.

These illustrations of what may be called the civil identification activities of the United States Bureau of Investigation are indicative of its activities, not only in the field of law enforcement but in the identification of various persons whose true identity may be clouded in doubt or totally unknown. The Identification Division service is rendered to all legally constituted law enforcement officials and agencies entirely free of cost and the criminal identification data on file have been of material assistance in increasing the efficiency of the operation of police departments and law enforcement agencies in restricting the field of criminal activity.
