John Edgar Noover, Director Federal Bureau of Investigation United States Department of Instice Washington, D. C.

With the ever increasing complexity of society law enforcement agencies are confronted with new problems which strike at the very foundation of their existence. The contributions to the progress of civilization made by inventors, chemists, and other scientists are appropriated for destructive and lawless purposes by that element which seeks to undermine our social and economic structure.

Our methods of fast transportation; our means of rapid communication; our improved scientific methods employed in the making and use of defensive weapons are notable contributions to society. But these same tools in the hands of those groups which exist by fear, force and might, preying upon the citizenry of our country, are more deadly and dangerous than the scourge of a pestilence.

The problem facing all law enforcement agencies is to meet adequately each group as promptly as it is discovered and thereby terminate its activities and destroy the organization which promotes the lawlessness.

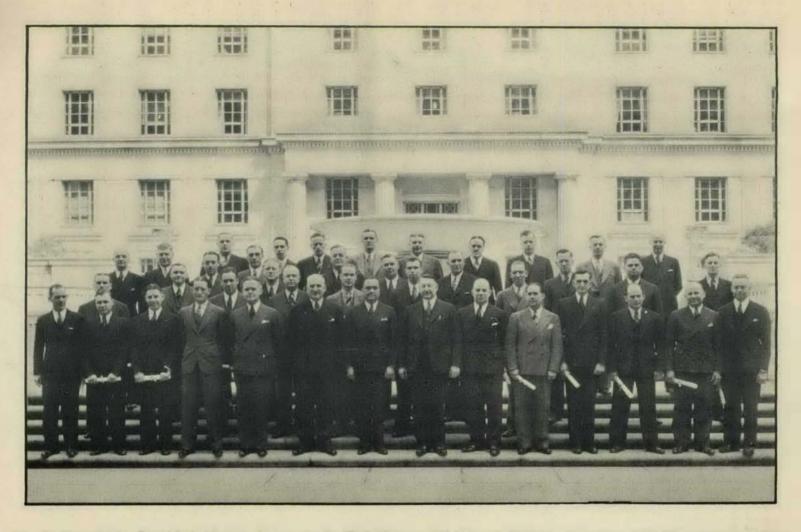

In accomplishing this objective other groups of like nature and purpose which prosper and flourish upon the observed success of a disregard of law, peace and order are deterred from succeeding in their ignoble results.

Herein lies the duty of all law enforcement agencies to be alert to such activities and to be able to cope with the difficulty when it arises. The means of accomplishing this purpose is through a personnel educated in the methods of such groups and individuals, a personnel that is cognizant of the means available to combat the menace and through cooperation of all law enforcement agencies, local, state, and Federal.

This has been and will continue to be the purpose and guiding principle of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The National Police Academy which is maintained through this organization offers assistance and training in all aspects of crime problems and methods. The Laboratory offers scientific aid to all law enforcement agencies in the solution of technical problems of clues and evidence. The Identification Division offers assistance in the apprehension of criminals who have sought to lose their identity. All of these services are rendered by the FBI to law enforcement agencies everywhere without cost to them.

Through the cooperation of local, state, and Federal agencies, as well as through the study and use of methods of crime detection, another step toward the extermination of crime and the betterment of public welfare will be accomplished.

ADDRESS OF DIRECTOR JOHN EDGAR HOOVER CLOSING EXERCISES FOURTH SESSION - FBI NATIONAL POLICE ACADEMY April 3, 1937.

Gentlemen, I am very happy indeed to meet with you again this morning. In some respects it is a rather sad occasion in that it brings to a termination three months of delightful association with each other. However, I feel certain that these friendships that have been developed during those three months will continue through the months and through the years to serve as real bonds of personal affection to each of you. It is a happy occasion because it marks the final placing of the block in that bridge over the gap between local law enforcement and Federal law enforcement agencies. At the opening of our Police Academy we referred to the fact that there was that so-called "gap" between the two great bodies of law enforcement. We believe we have done a great deal to bridge that over.

Of course, much has been said in this country about the formation of a national police organization, but the United States is no place for such a body of men.

We believe that much can be done by cooperation and coordination, and I believe that you gentlemen who are this morning leaving the National Police Academy as graduates of the fourth class are going out as missionaries and as crusaders, really, in that field of bridging over that gap. That bridge has now been built. What it may serve for will be in your hands. I feel quite confident, in my own mind, that it will serve as a useful medium, as an exchange of ideas, of help, and of cooperation in your problems - in our problems, and in the end will serve a great function in law enforcement for the American people.

In leaving this school, there are certain observations that I would like to make. I hope none of you go out of here today with the opinion or the feeling that you have learned all there is to know in your work as a law enforcement officer. I think all too often, in many professions, men reach a point where they think they know all the answers to all the questions. We find this attitude in many professions. I hope in the work of law enforcement none of us will ever reach that point, where he may feel he has reached that goal; that he has learned all about his profession. If you go out of here today with the feeling and belief that you have a great deal more to learn your jobs are going to be very much easier and I am quite certain that you will succeed in the work which you are going back to carry on.

There is much to learn, of course, in the field of law enforcement. Those of us who have been in it for many years realize that every day our problems grow more complex and we have to attack them with different methods and techniques. On the other hand, I don't want you to go forth with the feeling you are going into some very complex situation.

in carrying on new programs in your local communities. When you come down to it there is nothing mysterious about the work of law enforcement. It is observation, hard work, honesty, integrity, and application to duty. You gentlemen who have attended this course here have shown that you have all those qualities. It hasn't been an easy course. There have been days and nights of hard study. We appreciated that when you came here, and we have been more than gratified at the sincerity and the interest with which you tackled that problem. Many of you have been out of school for many years, and it is hard to adjust yourselves again to long hours of study. Each and every one of you did it in a masterful manner and each and every one of the communities from which you come should be justly proud of the representative they sent here. Each of you have measured up to the high standards of the classes that have preceded you. I feel confident you will continue those standards as you return to your local communities.

Now there are several factors in law enforcement work which I hope you won't lose sight of, not only for your own sake but for the sake of the community at large. Crime detection is not the only element in our problem. Crime detection plays a tremendous part in making law enforcement a success, and I am hopeful that you gentlemen will recognize that that is one of your great problems. Don't let it get out of your hands. We have, in many communities about the country theorists and philosophers who are dealing with theories and not the practical side of any situation, who try to inject themselves into the field of law enforcement. Don't let that happen in your communities. Take the leadership at the beginning, particularly in the field of crime prevention, and when you have looked into that field you find the adoration of the young boy for the police officer, provided that officer sets the right example. That is a tremendous responsibility for us to carry because that boy is looking up to someone of you as a hero in his community, for every boy has to have a hero, whether he be a good hero or a bad hero. Let us make law enforcement officers the heroes of our country. In doing so you take a tremendous step forward in the field of crime prevention, because you are starting in with the youth, and as we are all aware youth is where the majority of crimes have their beginning. I feel that we, as law enforcement officers, ought to assume that responsibility; we ought to give attention and study to crime prevention in our communities.

Then comes the problem of crime detection. That, of course, has been the closest thing to the hearts of us all, because that has been our real work.

Then comes the making of a case, the developing of the evidence, and carrying forth, also, the basic idea that you are not a persecutor - you are not really a prosecutor. You are there to get the evidence with which to prove the guilt or innocence of some man. You have a tremendous responsibility in your hands.

In order to merit the respect of your citizens in your various communities you have to do your job in a decent, clean, honorable way. It can't be carried on in the so-called "strong-arm manner." Those things are things of the past, and, therefore, if you enter your communities, accepting those responsibilities of leadership there is no reason why you can't carry forth those things, which I know, in the heart of each one of you, you want to do.

Of course, there are going to be obstacles. You will be met with the problem of politics, which, it seems to me, is a never-ending evil in this country, but I feel there has been progress in curbing that intrusion into the field of law enforcement. I know it exists in many cities to a marked degree but I believe that if we can have, in each community, one man who has seen the so-called "light of day" or the necessity of separating politics from law enforcement, we can ultimately bring about a permanent separation. Many of you gentlemen with whom I have talked individually are going back to communities that are somewhat backward in their viewpoints on problems of law enforcement. You have to sell the idea to them; you have to make them believe and know what you are trying to do. It makes no difference how good a job you are doing, if you don't sell it to the community you are going to be lost. They should be educated to what you are doing, not only because they are entitled to know what you are doing but because, primarily, they can be your strongest supporters. You will be faced with individuals in your police departments who are jealous of your advancement, who will resent the fact you are blazing a new trail. The so-called "oldtime police officer" will resent your intrusion into what he considers his sacred reserve. There is no reason why you can't succeed, but it doesn't mean that that path is going to be all of the so-called "easy going" process; you are going to have obstacles, and you are going to come out with scars, but I believe you are convinced, in your hearts, that you are on the right trail. You are going back to do a job that must be done, even though some of us may lose our lives in doing that job.

The profession of law enforcement is a career; it is a thing we want to cultivate. We want to make it the most honorable profession in this country. It is being condemned by various critics, but when you consider law enforcement as a profession, it is a comparatively new one. Police organizations have only been created in this country within the last century, and when you compare it with other countries of the world, with its many handicaps, with its dangers, with its salaries so utterly inadequate, it has gone ahead and made greater advances in its short period than any other profession in the world.

What we want to do, and what we hope to be able to do with the FBI Associates is to carry forth that crusade which has already been started. I know it can be done if we will just dig in and apply those things that make a success in any profession.

Now, in closing I do want to say to each one of you gentlemen here that not only has it been a great pleasure to know you personally but I want you to know, as you leave here today, that this association doesn't end; that as you leave Washington and go back to your respective communities our contacts really are beginning to take firm root. We want you to feel that we are friends here at Washington of yours ready to respond, at any time, to help in any way that we can. You will have problems in your respective communities; you will have times when you want advice, as well as counsel, and you will have times you want someone to help. I want you gentlemen to feel that every one of the members of the FBI Associates who have graduated before you, the eighty-one who have gone out from this Academy are right in back of you, man to man, in standing up to those things in law enforcement necessary to its success. I want you to know that every member of the FBI is a part of your group.

As you leave here today we give to you the motto of our organization - Fidelity, Bravery, and Integrity. We want you to feel that you are an integral part of the FBI.

I want to say that I wish for each one of you the greatest of success and of happiness and the attainment of those goals that I know exist within the soul of each one of you.

I thank you.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Recently the Bureau's attention has been called to the fact that certain contributors, using slightly different methods of extending and filing fingerprint cards than that used in the Bureau, have experienced difficulty in filing the fugitive notations published in each issue of the FBI Bulletin.

In order to assist contributors in filing these notations, commencing with this issue, the complete fingerprint classification of each subject will be indicated. In the past it has been thought sufficient to show the classification in the form necessary for filing in the Identification Division of the Bureau.

Hereafter the ridge counts for both little fingers will be indicated when both are loop impressions. Further, when practicable, the subsecondary classifications will be more fully shown.

It is the belief of the Bureau that the importance of placing the notations appearing in the FBI Bulletins in the fingerprint files of law enforcement agencies to prevent the release of subjects badly wanted by another department cannot be over-emphasized.

THE GROWTH OF LAW ENFORCEMENT

By Edward J. Kelly Superintendent, Rhode Island State Police

An address delivered before the Fourth Session of the National Police Academy at the closing exercises April 3, 1937, at Washington, D. C.

As I stand before this group of well-taught, finely-trained officers, I rejoice in the progress that has been made in modern times in the development of policemen, police methods, and police equipment. Pictures of the past flash before my eyes and the more I contemplate them the more I am impressed by the change, the miracle, that has been effected by the use of science and organization in the realm of police work.

In that unenlightened era the poor policeman, lacking instruction, discipline, scientific knowledge, cooperative spirit and modern equipment, tramped alone his solitary beat and faced crime and criminal conditions with whatever part of native sense and courage God had given him. Naturally his path was difficult and his mistakes many. It sometimes happened that actions against him for false arrest were successfully prosecuted and out of his own pocket he had to pay the damages. When he related these unfortunate experiences to his fellow officers, many of whom might be young and inexperienced, the result was most damaging to initiative and morale. The effect of this mingled propaganda and truth upon the minds of officers who had little understanding of law and little financial ability to meet risks and liabilities was that many adapted the lines of least resistance and "played safe" by making few, if any, arrests. Because of this condition the average police department throughout the country was actually deteriorating. It doubtless would have been advantageous to any department to retire any officer guilty of spreading this discouraging propaganda, but such a course was seldom adopted.

This condition prevailed until about ten years ago, when the International Association of Chiefs of Police began to recognize, to value, and to make a worthwhile use of those members of the various police forces who were endowed with superior qualities of mind and character. The recognition of the value and best use of broad police experience, initiative, high imagination, administrative and organization ability, marked the dawn of a new day in the police world. It was one of several causes that led to much reform and great progress along many police lines.

With a better understanding of police and public needs, the conventions of the International Association of Chiefs of Police became more serious, far-sighted and generally helpful. They applied new psychology and grappled with old problems in a new business-like way. A new spirit and new ideas were born. These, when put into practice, began to improve police service everywhere. Our present day police procedure and accomplishments bear ample evidence of the value and use of the ideas.

There came improvement in the matter and manner of crime reporting. This was achieved chiefly through the adoption by the International Association of Chiefs of Police of the policy and practice of forwarding all statistics pertaining to crime to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who classified the information in a way to give it form, meaning and value, and then returned a copy to all departments in the country. Gradually, with the growth of new ideas and methods, came the development of law enforcement as a profession.

During and after this adjustment and substitution of better men and methods, we were aided and encouraged greatly by the changed attitude of the newspapers. For many years, perhaps during the whole period of crude police methods, the policemen and organizations to which they belonged were repeatedly held up to ridicule and scornfully treated, or mistreated, by reporters and newspaper men who seemed to take infinite delight in painting vivid word-pictures of the weaknesses and defects of the so-called "flatfooted cop." However, in fairness it should be said that these newspaper criticisms were not wholly in vain. They hastened the day for putting our house in order. With conditions changed for the better, we now acknowledge with gratitude the praise and credit that is frequently extended to us by those newspapers. The road to reform in police organizations and works, as in many other lines of human endeavor, has not been a rosy path. We have encountered difficulties innumerable, some of them almost insurmountable. For instance, there is the problem of paroling prisoners, which directly or indirectly has affected our departments and the work they are attempting to do. From time to time we have experienced an almost endless amount of difficulty as the result of the indiscriminate paroling of dangerous criminals. Many times, with all the personal courage and scientific skill we could command, we have tracked down, arrested, and finally convicted these abnormal and worthless characters only to find that evil influences were already at work to arrange for the speedy liberation of the culprits. By the expenditure of money, time, and effort we can get these convictions, but after we have obtained them it is most discouraging to find that it is not only difficult to keep them in jail but almost impossible to do so. Consequently the protection we can offer to society is somewhat limited by our inability to overcome this obstacle - all of which proves that the public and all agencies of the public are responsible for the enforcement or non-enforcement of law. We need more public pressure in favor of all phases of law enforcement.

One thing is sure - we must challenge, meet, and overcome wrong-ful opposition and antagonistic elements whensoever they may arise, even though it be among ourselves and in the heart of our own ranks. The time is fast approaching when such trouble-making traits as envy and jealousy, which have for many years wrought havoc in police departments and places of high authority, must be eliminated.

Fortunately, the great majority of our American citizens are law-abiding, and they are not only willing but enthusiastically desirous of having all persons adhere to the law and recognize and respect all lawful authority. They do, however, and I believe rightfully - expect and insist that we who make up the organizations that preserve and enforce the law shall not contribute to this breakdown of dutiful respect by violating our sworn obligations to resist, and according to the measure of our ability, eliminate any and all elements that tend to weaken the cornerstone of our American justice and liberty.

The cooperative spirit of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has given all our organizations a new lease of life and bright prospects. To my mind the Federal Bureau of Investigation represents the Coast Guard of the police world. It throws a rescue rope to our rudderless ship, tows us safely into port and stands by until proper and necessary repairs are effected.

THE QUALIFICATIONS OF A POLICE OFFICER

John L. Sullivan, Chief of Police, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, in an address to the National Police Academy at the closing exercises of the Fourth Session on April 3, 1937, pointed out that the first duty of a police officer is the prevention of crime. Detection and conviction of the culprit are secondary. The prime qualities that make a good police official are loyalty, cooperation, and diplomacy. An officer must be loyal to his fellow officers, he must be willing to cooperate, and he must have an understanding of the art of diplomacy.

The purpose of the National Police Academy is to instruct and teach officers the art of police work, to fit them not only to solve crimes, but to become executives in any police force. With this in mind and the goal established, the President, the Attorney General, and the International Association of Chiefs of Police are interested in each member. Aware of the ideals, the obligations and responsibilities placed on each member it behooves each one to ask himself the question, "Am I ready?"

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT - COMPLETE CASE HISTORIES

It will materially assist the Federal Bureau of Investigation in compiling complete records of criminals if the various contributing agencies furnish the Bureau with any criminal data which may appear in their files and has not been indicated on the abstract of record furnished by the FBI.

It is felt that information of this type may be forwarded on the disposition sheets or additional criminal record forms sometimes employed for this purpose.

Some records of this character exist because they represent charges on fingerprints taken before the FBI operated a truly representative National Bureau. They should be available in the Bureau's files to make the case records complete.

MARIHUANA

Marihuana, variously referred to as marijuana, mariguana, cannabis sativa, cannabis indica, hashish, hashhash, hasheesh, hachhach, Indian hemp, reefer weed, Maslac, Mojuch, Charus, Bhang or Ganja, was first observed in the Orient by those desiring exhilarating effects to offset the properties of smoking opium. The growth and use of the weed soon reached Central and Western Asia, following along the Mediterranean and thence west to the Americas into Brazil and Mexico. From Mexico it has spread into the United States where it is becoming one of the greatest narcotic problems of the times.

CANNABIS SATIVA & MARRIHUANA

PICTURE - NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

The present Government regulation under the Food and Drugs Act, directs the collectors of customs to refuse delivery of all consignments of dried, flowering tops of the pistillate plants of cannabis sativa, unless the importer shall first execute penal bond conditioned that the drug referred to will not be sold or otherwise disposed of for any purpose other than the preparation of a medicine. No cannabis sativa was imported pursuant to this regulation during 1934, indicating that all supplies for legitimate uses were obtained from domestic sources. (1)

Marijuana derived its name during the time when the Arab Chieftain Saladin, a Mohammedan and greatest enemy of the First Crusade, demoralized his troops by the use of the weed. The soldiers were promised added supplies of the drug for the assassination of their enemies. Hence the word marijuana has been referred to as hack-hack, hashhash, hasheesh or assassin weed.

The medicinal uses of cannabis sativa are to relieve pain, to encourage sleep, and to soothe restlessness. For its analgesic action, it is used especially in pains of neuralgic origin, such as migraine. As a general nerve sedative, it is useful in hysteria, mental depression, neurasthenia, and the like. (2)

Marijuana, Indian or the common hemp, is derived from cannabis sativa and used as a fiber of commerce principally in the production of twine and cordage, bags, mats and belts. Because this fiber has more tensile strength while wet and does not rot as readily as does the jute fiber when wetted, this type of hemp has an increased commercial demand thus insuring its growth in some parts of the world at least for an extended time.

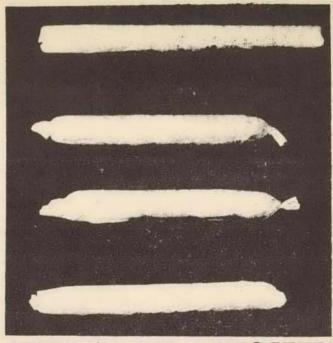

The weed is an annual plant, having a straight stalk and elongated, highly dentated leaves with a narcotic odor. The leaves occur in bunches of three, five or seven, while the flower develops into the seed on maturity. The shrub is classed botanically as dioecious; that is, it belongs to a class of plants in which the sexes are divided, some bearing only clusters of male flowers and others bearing only clusters of female flowers, the latter producing the seeds. The female plants grow on the average from six to fifteen feet in height, while the male plant is much shorter.

It may be said that hemp is grown in the temperate climate for its fiber and its seed but in the warmer climates more for use as a narcotic. Cannabis indica, which is the hemp of northern India, Turkestan, Persia, Syria, Arabia, in many parts of Africa, Greece and in Brazil, is identical botanically with the ordinary hemp cannabis sativa of temperate climates.(3) The plant grown for its fiber is harvested early, that is, before the plant begins to bloom or before the plant reaches its full growth.

Marijuana used for smoking consists of the dried and broken leaves and flowering tops of the plant and occasionally the smaller twigs of the top portion of the plant. Occasions have been cited where those growing the weed for their own consumption have stripped the green leaves from the plant and dried them with the aid of an electric toaster and thus produced the desired product only a few minutes after picking. The resinous product producing the narcotic effects is more potent at the time the plant is fully developed, thus the green plant readily dried probably would not have as deleterious an effect upon the smoker.

MARRIHUANA CIGARETTES

KNOWN AS

"REFERS" " MUGGLES"

ACTUAL SIZE - HAND MADE

PICTURE - NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Cigarettes also referred to as "reefers" or "muggles" are usually handrolled although occasionally they appear rolled as if prepared on the home type cigarette roller. The paper used is usually of double thickness and often of a yellow or tan color. The thicker paper is necessary as the broken bits of twigs and leaves readily pierce the common type of cigarette paper. It is smoked in a normal manner as it is very free burning. Some marijuana palaces supply small trays which are held beneath the chin of the smoker while smoking to collect the falling ashes. It may be mixed with tobacco and smoked in a water pipe, dry pipe or cigarette or mixed with other aromatic substances or drugs.

In the preparation of marijuana for chewing or eating, it is rolled into tablet form using sugar, licorice, honey, molasses, or a caramel type of candy. When drinking an extract is prepared using the leaves, which is added to tea or coffee.

The effects of marijuana upon the human system differs according to the character and personality of the individual; however, the action centers on the brain in all instances. There appears to be three stages through which an individual passes, the first being a highly nervous condition where he feels jovial and carefree and may try feats to test his physical strength. He may indulge in a smoke of the weed before taking steps to settle a seeming grudge held by a friend or imaginary foe who may be the first person he meets.

In the second stage the user is affected by hallucinations which affect the eyesight as well as hearing. He appears to become taller, distance is greatly increased and time lengthens, followed with fits of laughter or weeping. He imagines himself a great radio singer or actor and attempts to portray the several images that appear in his dream. The subject may believe that he is riding horseback, piloting an airplane, operating a streetcar or driving an automobile.

One can readily see the possible damage that may be caused while a person is in this state. He may be driving along the highway and think he is only creeping along at fifteen miles per hour when in reality he is driving sixty or seventy. Suddenly an occasion arises calling for instant application of the foot brake but the time taken to coordinate his thoughts and have the impulse transferred to his feet, is so long that a serious accident may and oftentimes does ensue.

Following the second stage he lapses into the third and most dangerous stage. He really becomes a fiend with savage or "cave man" tendencies. His sex desires are aroused and some of the most horrible crimes result. He hears light and sees sounds. To get away from it, he suddenly becomes violent and may kill. In fact he has gone completely mad and he may never recover. No crime known may escape him, and while he is running amuck, he may kill his loved ones and nearest friends. Marijuana is not considered a habit forming drug in the same sense as opium or morphine. Often more is used by the subject and his brain is so affected that a complete breakdown follows and the subject may spend his last days in an asylum. It has been said that marijuana is more harmful than opium.

The methods for testing marijuana are microscopical and chemical. After comparing the various parts of the plant with known specimens, a microscopical examination of the under side of the leaves will disclose the presence of tufts of simple hairs and crystolithic hairs. (4)

At the base of these tufts of hairs will be observed a white powdery deposit which is calcium carbonate. To test add a drop of acid and note the effervescent bubbling action similar to that when soda is placed on an acid.

To date there has been only one chemical test found to be applicable, known as the Beam's Test. (5)

"The suspected material is extracted with petroleum ether (6) of low boiling point and which leaves no perceptible residue when evaporated

The petroleum ether extract is separated, passed through a filter and evaporator to dryness in a small porcelain capsule. Both extraction and evaporation should be carried out in the cold. To the residue a few drops of weak alcoholic solution of potash or soda (about deci-normal strength) are added, and the liquid allowed to evaporate at room temperature. The gradual development of the color, which is due to the oxidation of the colorless compound first formed is an important feature of the test. (7), (8)

It has been found that some plants fail to respond to the above tests especially if they are of a young growth where the resinous material has not yet developed.

An interesting case brought to the attention of the Technical Laboratory of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was occasioned by the request of the Police Department at Jackson, Mississippi. While conducting a liquor raid at the home of Lee Curtis Harris, officers discovered what they believed to be a marijuana plant growing in the back yard.

Under the State Uniform Drug Act recently enacted in the State of Mississippi in an effort to cope with the narcotic problem, possession or cultivation of marijuana is punishable by imprisonment from one to ten years in the state penitentiary and the assessment of a varying fine depending upon pertinent circumstances.

Realizing the necessity for proving that the plant in question was definitely marijuana, and having at its disposal no facilities for such determination, the Police Department of Jackson, Mississippi, submitted a sample of the suspected plant to the Technical Laboratory of the Federal Bureau of Investigation with the request that an analysis be made of the sample. In accordance with the Bureau's policy of making the facilities of its Technical Laboratory available to recognized law enforcement agencies without charge, the requested examination was made, and as a result the sample of plant submitted for examination was definitely ascertained to be marijuana or Cannabis Sativa L.

Testimony to this effect was introduced at the trial of Harris in Jackson, Mississippi, on November 30, 1936, by a technician from the Bureau's Laboratory. A jury in the case, after hearing the arguments presented by the prosecution and the defense, deliberated for only two minutes and returned a verdict of guilty as charged. Harris was sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary.

The FBI invites all law enforcement agencies to make use of its Laboratory facilities in current cases being investigated by them.

ESCAPED MURDERER IDENTIFIED BY FINGERPRINTS OVER TWELVE YEARS AFTER ESCAPE

On July 2, 1924, Arthur Burch was received at the State Penitentiary, Tucker, Arkansas, to serve a sentence of fifteen years for first degree murder. This sentence had been imposed on Burch June 30, 1924, in Garland County.

Arthur Burch was incarcerated in the Arkansas State Penitentiary until January 4, 1925, when he effected his escape from that institution. Subsequently at the request of the officials of the State Penitentiary at Tucker, Arkansas, the FBI posted a wanted notice in the files of the Identification Division that Arthur Burch was wanted by the Arkansas State Penitentiary for escape. In April, 1936, this individual was published as a fugitive in the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin.

On March 22, 1937, over twelve years after the escape of Arthur Burch from the Arkansas State Penitentiary, there was received in the Identification Division of the FBI the fingerprint card of one Raymond Wilson, who had been arrested by the Police Department at Atlantic City, New Jersey, on March 18, 1937, on a charge of carrying concealed dangerous weapons. This fingerprint card from the Police Department at Atlantic City, New Jersey, reflected that Raymond Wilson alleged that he was a resident of Atlantic City and that he had been born in New Orleans, Louisiana. When the finger impressions of Raymond Wilson were searched through the files of the Identification Division it was ascertained that they were identical with those of Arthur Burch who had been received at the Arkansas State Penitentiary in July, 1924. The Bureau immediately directed a wire to the Warden of the Arkansas State Penitentiary, informing him that the escaped murderer had been apprehended by the Atlantic City, New Jersey, Police Department. On March 30, 1937, there was received another fingerprint card from the Police Department at Atlantic City, New Jersey, advising the Bureau that Raymond Wilson, alias Arthur Burch, was then being held by that Police Department as an escaped prisoner awaiting return to the Arkansas State Penitentiary.

This case aptly illustrates the infallible identification by fingerprints of an individual who had moved from the scene of his earlier crimes to take up his criminal activity in a section of the country far distant from that where his previous offenses occurred.

THE CHEMICAL DEVELOPMENT OF LATENT FINGERPRINTS ON PAPER

Considerable attention has been given during the past several years, by the Technical Laboratory of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to the study of the development of latent fingerprints appearing on paper and similar material. This research project is not complete but it is possible at this time to outline several processes which have been found satisfactory in making visible latent fingerprints several days to a number of weeks old. These do not necessarily involve newly invented formulae but are the results of checking, verifying, and experimenting with established practices in chemistry. The results will generally depend on the nature of the paper or material examined and also vary depending upon the chemical composition of the individual secretions making up the latent print and climatic conditions to which the material has been exposed after the print has been deposited thereon.

One of the most convenient methods found to develop latent fingerprints on paper when the latent prints are not too old is to fume the paper in iodine gases. This is most conveniently accomplished by placing a number of crystals of iodine in an open evaporating dish and placing this dish in the bottom of a large container known as a fuming box and having a clear glass front to permit inspection of the material within. The iodine gases will in ordinary room temperature generate of their own volition and no additional heat is needed. Should the release of the gases be proceeding too slowly, however, the bottom of the evaporating dish may be gently warmed. The gases will be recognized by their violet color and as soon as the container has sufficient iodine vapor as indicated by the color, the document or paper which is to be examined for fingerprints is placed into the gas. The prints will become visible quite rapidly and the development may be viewed through the glass front of the container. When removed from the gases the developed print will be found to be quite fugitive and will disappear in ten or fifteen minutes, which necessitates the photographing of or otherwise treating such prints for record purposes in the interim. course, the prints may be again developed after the gases have left by again placing the document in the fumes. With regard to photographing, no difficulty has been experienced in the Bureau and photographs of prints so developed have been successfully made without the use of filters.

A method of generating the iodine fumes without utilizing a fuming cabinet but rather blowing the fumes onto the surface to be examined, has been recently advocated. The bottom of a Gooch funnel is plugged with glass wool. About one inch of eight-mesh anhydrous calcium chloride is placed in the funnel and a plug of glass wool is placed on top of this. A second funnel is attached to the large end of this funnel by means of a one-hole rubber stopper. The bottom of this funnel is plugged with glass wool and about one-half inch of iodine crystals are placed on top and held in place by another plug of glass wool. By blowing through the calcium chloride end of the system copious fumes are generated. The apparatus may be handled more easily by attaching a rubber tube to the system and blowing through that.

When a considerable amount of starch is present in the sizing of the paper, it is possible to fix the iodine prints by passing the paper momentarily through a current of steam. The reaction between the iodine in the print and the starch of the paper will give a deep blue coloration which will persist for several days. In this way many prints, too faint to be of value, may be brought out. Another manner of obtaining a permanent record of the iodine prints is to apply a plate of polished silver directly to the iodine developed print. The silver plate with the transferred finger impression is then exposed to a brilliant light and the silver iodide is reduced to a black silver outline. The silver plate method is generally used when fingerprints on hard-surfaced objects other than paper have been developed with iodine fumes.

Another method of fuming paper for the development of latent fingerprints so that the fingerprints are made permanently visible involves the use of osmic acid in a small evaporating dish containing absorbent cotton. A drop or two of 1% osmic acid is placed on the cotton and the evaporating dish placed in the bottom of a container (the same as used for iodine fuming) the document then being placed within the container. The fumes will generate of their own volition in normal room temperature.

These fumes are obnoxious and should not be breathed. Development of fingerprints is somewhat slow and may take from one to twelve hours depending upon the age of the prints and other factors. The latent fingerprints developed are of a silver color, quite sharp in outline, and remain fixed or permanent.

Fingerprints on many kinds of paper under certain conditions have been successfully developed up to eight months of age and even older by treating the paper with silver nitrate. The paper is allowed to float momentarily on a bath consisting of a 3% solution of silver nitrate, both sides of the document being treated in this manner. The excess moisture may then be removed with clean blotters and the paper exposed to a brilliant light, such as a 1000 watt blue or daylight photographer's lamp, a mercury arc or carbon arc light. Where fingerprints have been deposited the silver chloride will darken and the prints will be made visible as dark brown outlines against the light background. The paper should be removed from the light as soon as the characteristic detail of the fingerprints has been sufficiently developed, otherwise the silver nitrate combined on the paper with impurities will continue to darken and the background contrast will be lost. Paper so treated will continue to slowly darken unless kept in absolute darkness which will serve to somewhat deter the reducing action. The stain together with the fingerprints may be removed from the paper by immersing the document in a bath of 3% potassium cyanide. After such treatment the paper should be thoroughly rinsed to remove the cyanide and then dried. It must be remembered that potassium cyanide is a deadly poison and every precaution should be taken in its use to prevent accidents. The stains may also be removed using a 2% solution of mercuric nitrate and then the paper washed in three changes of distilled water. This solution may be handled without any special precaution. The latter method has little or no effect on ink, while the former will often fade or alter the color of the ink. It is also well to use care in the use of the silver nitrate as contact with the skin will leave brown stains which are not readily removable.

The above methods have been found applicable to unpainted wood and similar semi-porous materials.*

*Because of the importance of the chemical development of latent fingerprints on paper as evidenced by the number of requests received by the Bureau concerning them, it is deemed advisable to supplement an article on the same subject appearing in the November, 1934, issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin.

FINGER IMPRESSIONS OF UNKNOWN DECEASED MAN IDENTIFIED WITH PRIOR FBI RECORD

As the months pass more and more fingerprint cards representing the finger impressions of unknown deceased individuals are transmitted to the Identification Division of the Bureau for search. During the month of March, 1937, the fingerprints of 118 unknown deceased individuals were received in the Identification Division and identifications were effected from records already in the Bureau's possession in 24 instances, enabling the Bureau to advise interested law enforcement agencies and officials in practically one case out of five of pertinent data regarding the antecedents, residences, and family connections of an individual whose identity was previously unknown to them.

On March 29, 1937, there were recorded in the Identification Division of the FBI the finger impressions of an unknown man who had been found dead in Yuma, Arizona, on March 26, 1937. When this fingerprint card, which was forwarded by the Sheriff at Yuma, Arizona, was searched through the Bureau's files it was ascertained that this individual was one George Shauffle, alias Charles Dover Kennedy, alias Richard De Reimers, alias George Godfrey Schauffle, alias Richard C. Stanley. His correct name was believed to be Charles Dover Kennedy and he had a criminal record extending from July 21, 1918, to the time of his death, and had committed offenses in the States of Michigan, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, and Arizona.

A telegram was immediately dispatched to the Sheriff at Yuma, Arizona, advising him that an identification had been effected and informing him that the fingerprint cards on file in the Bureau reflected the unknown deceased person's birthplace as Plymouth, Michigan. The last residence of Kennedy and the present address of the victim's mother were also furnished.

ED LANHAM

SOIL FROM SCENE OF CRIME FOUND ON SHOES OF SUSPECT

The Police Department of Beaumont, Texas, investigating the burglary of two safes took into custody on February 3, 1936, one Ed Lanham, suspected of being responsible for the depredations. Hidden in the bedroom of the suspect was found a pair of shoes which the subject stated he had not worn for a period of two months. The examining officers noticed, however, the shoes were moist and covered with a mud residue. The safes had been stolen from a mercantile store in Beaumont and had been removed by automobile to the outskirts of the city, where they were forced open and subsequently discarded on the roadway. Footprints were noticed at this point. The investigating officers obtained samples of the soil at the place where the safes had been forced open and transmitted these together with scrapings from the shoes of Lanham to the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington with a request that effort be made to determine whether there were similarities in the specimens. Following examination by technical experts of the Bureau's Laboratory, it was possible to advise the Chief of Police at Beaumont that the soil removed from the shoes of the suspect was identical with the sample taken from the roadway in respect to size and shape of the mineral particles of sand and in respect to other mineral constituents making up the soil samples. In addition, small fragments of shell were found to be present in each.

Subsequently the police advised the Bureau that Lanham had a previous criminal record involving crime of a similar nature. They further advised that an automobile with identical tire designs on respective wheels had left tire tracks beside the store from which the safes were taken, at the point where the safes were found, and in Lanham's backyard.

Under date of March 4, 1937, Chief of Police L. B. Maddox advised the Bureau that Lanham had pleaded guilty not only to the particular charge indicated above but also to approximately one hundred other safe burglaries involving a total of eighteen defendants who also had been convicted.

CONTRIBUTORS' COOPERATION ASKED IN USE OF FBI NUMBERS

Frequently it is difficult to locate records on file in the Identification Division of the Bureau because contributors, when submitting wanted notices or correspondence, do not furnish the data required to expedite the location of the pertinent records.

The Bureau's problem may be more fully understood when it is realized that the Bureau's Identification Division now has on file a total of more than 7,000,000 fingerprint cards.

It is suggested that whenever available the FBI number for the subject concerned be furnished the Bureau. If the FBI number is unknown or none has been assigned, it will assist materially if one or more arrest numbers of the individual be indicated.

A QUESTIONABLE FINGERPRINT PATTERN

Below is reproduced the final example of questionable finger impressions which are classified as tented arches due to the presence of only two of the three essential elements of a loop.

It may be noted that in this case a complete recurve appears in the center of the pattern area and a ridge count of one could be obtained if a delta were present. However, due to the absence of the delta formation, this type of impression is classified as a tented arch in the Bureau's Identification Division.

MISSING PERSON'S IDENTITY EFFECTED THROUGH FINGERPRINTS

On December 1, 1936, Mrs. Paggie Davison of Poughquag, New York, addressed a letter to the Federal Bureau of Investigation stating that she desired assistance in locating her husband, one John C. Davison, from whom she had not heard in some time. In her communication she stated that she thought something might have happened to her spouse, whom she had last heard from in Chicago, Illinois.

Mrs. Davison was advised that while it was not within the jurisdiction of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to conduct an active investigation with a view to locating her husband, John C. Davison, a missing person notice was being placed in the Bureau's files providing that in the event any information was subsequently received in the Identification Division pertaining to this individual she would be notified. In her communication addressed to the Bureau the missing man's wife had stated that her husband had at one time been incarcerated in the State Prison at Jackson, Michigan. A search of the Bureau's files reflected that one John Davison had been received at the above-mentioned institution on October 18, 1929, to serve a sentence of from four to ten years for assault with intent to do great bodily harm. John Davison had been arrested at Muskegon, Michigan, for this offense, on August 25, 1929. A missing person notice was placed in the Bureau's files summarizing the information received from Mrs. Paggie Davison.

On March 25, 1937, there was received in the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation the finger impressions of an unknown dead man who was thought to be identical with John Davison. The Chicago, Illinois, Police Department advised the Bureau that this individual died at the County Hospital in Cook County and that his body was being held in the County Morgue. A search of the files of the Identification Division reflected that the finger impressions of the dead man were identical with those of John Davison who, in 1929, had been incarcerated in the State Prison, Jackson, Michigan.

Mrs. Paggie Davison was advised by letter of this information received by the Bureau, and it was suggested that she communicate with the Police Department at Chicago, Illinois, in regard to this matter.

This case is an example of identification effected through fingerprints, in the instance of a missing person. John C. Davison, because of the fact that he had previously been arrested, was definitely identified with the dead man whose finger impressions were transmitted to the Bureau by the Chicago, Illinois, Police Department. This case is illustrative, also, of the help that might be afforded by the Civil Identification Section of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to relatives of an individual whose fingerprints are recorded therein, if this individual should become a missing person or the victim of amnesia and some agency should subsequently transmit the finger impressions of said individual to the Bureau in an effort to ascertain an unknown or partially known identity.

GROWTH OF IDENTIFICATION DIVISION DURING MARCH, 1937.

During the month of March, 1937, 121,320 fingerprint cards were received and handled in the Identification Division of the FBI. There were 82,802 criminal fingerprint cards received and retained during the month just passed. The Identification Division of the FBI received and handled more fingerprint cards and received and retained more criminal fingerprints in March, 1937, than during any month in the history of the Bureau.

New records were also established in the number of fingerprint cards reflecting current arrests which were received in the Identification Division during the month of March, 1937. A total of 84,106 cards bearing the finger impressions of individuals arrested for various criminal offenses and violations were received in the Division. Of the 82,802 criminal fingerprint cards received and retained, 47,953, or 57.9%, were identified with prior criminal records in the files of the Identification Division.

On March 31, 1937, there were on hand in the fingerprint files of the Identification Division a total of 6,981,866 fingerprint cards. When one contrasts this figure with the 810,188 fingerprint cards which formed the nucleus of the present Identification Division in 1924 one realizes the tremendous growth that has taken place in the slightly more than twelve years that have elapsed since the FBI received the fingerprint cards which had previously been maintained at the United States Penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kansas, and the Bureau maintained in 1924 by the International Association of Chiefs of Police at Washington, D. C.

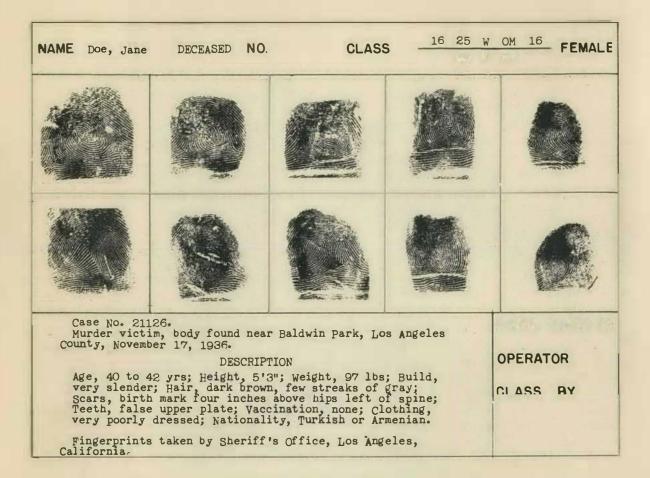

At the end of March wanted notices were posted in the finger-print files of the Identification Division on 21,229 fugitives and it is interesting to note that during the month just passed 518 fugitives were located. The wanted notices which are posted in the files of the Identification Division represent individuals wanted by law enforcement agencies and officials not only in the United States but in foreign countries.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

It is desired to call to the attention of all contributors that fingerprints forwarded to the Identification Division in the Bureau's penalty envelopes will be sent by first class mail only. When it appears desirable to use the facilities offered by the Air Mail, Special Delivery, or Air Mail-Special Delivery in transmitting fingerprint records to the Federal Bureau of Investigation requisite postage for that purpose must be affixed before mailing.

However, fingerprints forwarded to the Bureau by any of the special mails mentioned above will be answered in like manner, free of charge to the contributing agency.

UNIDENTIFIED MURDER VICTIM

The finger impressions appearing above are those of an unidentified female murder victim and were received in the Federal Bureau of Investigation on November 20, 1936, from the Sheriff's Office, Los Angeles, California. The body was found near Baldwin Park, Los Angeles County, November 17, 1936, with the head of the victim badly battered and the skull fractured.

Contributors are requested to cooperate in attempting to identify this woman by searching the fingerprints indicated above through their files.

An unusually interesting situation arose when the mother and sister of one Ruby Harris identified the victim in this case as the said Ruby Harris. However, this identification was proved to be erroneous when the finger impressions of Ruby Harris, taken by the Police Department, Hannibal, Missouri, in June, 1934, were compared with those of the victim and found not to be identical.
