Vol. 2 No. 9

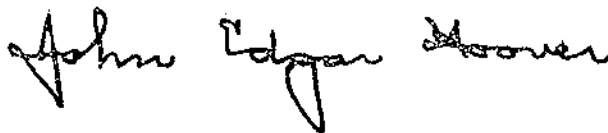

September 1, 1933.

Most of you no doubt know that on August 10, 1933, the United States Bureau of Investigation became the Division of Investigation, U. S. Department of Justice.

At this time I wish to express my sincere appreciation to the law-enforcement agencies and officials throughout the United States for the splendid cooperation and helpful aid which they have always tendered the old United States Bureau of Investigation and to bespeak for the new Division of Investigation a continuation of such whole-hearted support from peace officials, generally, which will make possible the continued development of the Division. In return, I pledge you, on behalf of the Division, the uninterrupted continuation of the services which this Division has rendered you in the past in all phases of law-enforcement work.

The Division welcomes suggestions whereby it may improve its Fugitives Wanted by Police Bulletin, as well as suggestions which may prove helpful to the Division in further serving you, the peace officials and law-enforcement agencies of this country.

Permit me to again pledge you the support and aid of the Division of Investigation in our warfare upon crime. It is my earnest hope that all peace officers will continue to report to the various field offices of this Division, listed herein, violations of the Federal laws also named in this publication, so the perpetrators thereof may be brought to justice; that the thousands of law-enforcement agencies enrolled as contributors to the Identification Unit will follow the practice of transmitting fingerprints in the case of each arrest or incarceration in order that complete records of law violators may be available to officials seeking the same, and that more liberal use may be made of the Division's facilities in the placing of wanted notices so that fugitives from justice may be identified and returned to custody without delay.

Director.

The article which follows was prepared and issued by the Federal Board for Vocational Education as Miscellaneous No. 1451.

DISPOSAL BY POLICE OF EXPLOSIVES

In the course of a series of conferences with members of the Metropolitan Police Department of Omaha, Nebraska, March 6 to 17, 1933, it was brought out that Police Officers may run across explosives, such as dynamite, blasting caps, nitro glycerine, war relics (shells, grenades, etc.) and bombs. The problem which arose was how to dispose safely of such dangerous explosives. Upon his return to Washington, D. C., Mr. C. F. Klinefelter, of the staff of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, who had conducted the conferences in Omaha, interviewed Dr. C. E. Munroe, Chief Explosives Chemist, Explosives Division, of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, with reference to the problems presented. During the conversation with Dr. Munroe, he made the following points:

1. SAFEST DISPOSAL. The safest disposal of explosives such as powder, dynamite, blasting caps, and nitro glycerine is to put them to legitimate use. When the Police come into possession of explosives, they should, first of all, endeavor to find some reliable explosives man, blasting expert, or construction contractor whom they can trust to use the explosives in his regular work. A contractor who is blasting with dynamite, can dispose of old or partially decomposed dynamite by mixing it with the charges of his own regular supply, the good dynamite exploding the bad.

2. DYNAMITE. If occasion arises where the police must dispose of dynamite, themselves, the safest procedure is to burn it, under proper precautions.

Some suitable place should be chosen, out in the open, where a barricade of earth, timbers, etc., can be thrown up to protect the officers who are burning the dynamite, in case any explosions do occur.

If the dynamite is in boxes, it should be removed from the boxes and be burned separately from the boxes.

One should never attempt to burn dynamite and boxes together. The nails in the boxes become heated quickly and if hot metal comes in contact with dynamite, it will cause it to explode. The box also, of itself, partially confines the dynamite, which greatly increases the hazard if an explosion occurs. Dynamite boxes, if nailed shut, should be opened by the use of wooden wedges and a wooden mallet.

In proceeding to burn the dynamite, the cartridges or sticks should be opened and the dynamite spread out thin on the ground. In opening the cartridges or sticks, care should be used to prevent the dynamite getting on the bare hands in order to guard against the danger of nitro glycerine poisoning.

With the dynamite spread out thin, it may then be sprinkled lightly with kerosene (coal oil) and set on fire with a train leading from behind the barricade at a safe distance. The train is made of rolled up newspapers, wet with kerosene.

In arranging train, consideration should be given the wind so that the fire will be carried toward the dynamite from the person behind the barricade.

The boxes, if any, should be set on fire and burned from behind the barricade in like manner, by themselves. Even so, there is a definite hazard of explosion in burning boxes, due to the dynamite having soaked into the wood, hence the full protection of the barricade must be used.

3. BLASTING CAPS. Blasting caps, (dynamite caps or detonators), are especially hazardous, due to the fact that they are a constant potential menace until actually destroyed, and because their bright shiny appearance makes them most alluring, not only to children but to many adults as well. The only safe way to dispose of them is to burn them out in the open, from behind a barricade at a safe distance, out of range of flying particles of metal, using the same general procedure as in burning dynamite, but even greater precautions.

4. NITRO GLYCERINE. Nitro glycerine should Never be poured down a toilet or sink. As it is much heavier than water, it will stay in the trap and not be carried through by flushing with water, and might be set off at any time through sudden shock or jarring.

The proper way to dispose of it is to chemically decompose it with an alcoholic solution of sodium sulphide, mixed according to the following proportions:

One-half gallon of water
One-half gallon of methanol
Two pounds of sodium sulphide.

In a case described by Captain Robert Munch of the Omaha Police Department, detectives found a safe with outer door blown, but inner door still charged with nitro glycerine. (The second charge had not gone off as a wet mattress hung over the safe to deaden the sound had extinguished the fuse.) The charge of nitro glycerine was dissolved out by the detectives with the use of denatured alcohol. Dr. Munroe stated that this was a proper procedure to use under the circumstances, provided that a large quantity of alcohol was used in diluting and dissolving the nitro glycerine.

He emphasized however that where the nitro can be handled in bulk, as in bottles or other containers or where spilled in the open as on floors, where it can be washed down, the safest and best procedure is to chemically decompose it by using the sodium sulphide solution.

5. WAR RELICS AND BOMBS. The safest disposition by the police of war relics and bombs is to sink them in the river in some deep hole, if possible. A second choice would be to bury them deep in the ground, but here they would constitute a potential menace or hazard, as excavating operations might bring them to light at some future time.
